Next Week at the Liberty

Opening Sunday at the Liberty Theatre is Paramount's Olypiad farce, "Million Dollar Legs," said to be one of the most insanely funny pictures ever filmed. Not even the various comedies in which the Four Marx Brothers have appeared reach so high a pinnacle of sheer, nonsensical buffoonery as does this picture, according to advance reports.

It is laid in the mythical Republic of Klopstokia, where all the girls are named Angela and all the men George; where it is a jail offense not to kiss a pretty girl; where the runners are so fast that they trip over frightened rabbits and have to hurdle fleeing deer; where the women are so beautiful that all the men find it totally impossible to keep their minds on their work—except the president who is a woman-hater.

Jack Oakie, as the "clown prince," is the man who leads Klopstokia to a thrilling victory in the Olympics.

Knife Hospital Notes

B. Zinn, of Remote, entered the hospital for treatment on Monday. The same day, Rodney Barrows, of Langlois, had his tonsils removed.
