Both Remic Scouts are made in the same factory, by the same workmen and with the same care as Remington office models.

Tax Case Appeal Soon

The plaintiff's brief in the case of R. F. Milne vs. H. E. Hess, sheriff, appeal to the supreme court from Judge Brand's decision in favor of the defendant, will soon be ready for submission to the supreme court, and it is hoped to have the case heard before District Attorney Walsh's term of office expires Jan. 1.

This is the case in which Dr. Milne tendered the tax collection department that portion of the taxes on his property in Powers, which were levied for school purposes, not paying the road, county or state levy. It was filed as a test case to learn if a taxpayer could pay one particular item of the combined levy and was decided by Judge Brand in circuit court here in favor of the defendant, the decision being that the tax collector was not required to accept taxes for one levy only, although it has been the practice for several months to accept partial payment of taxes. In the latter case, however, the amount paid has been pro-rated among the several levies, while Dr. Milne's effort was to have his entire payment go to the Powers school district.

Basket ball on the bay is not causing any excessive display of joy, nor is it bringing forth a pessimistic feeling. Both Coach Osborn at Marshfield and Coach Adams at North Bend have large squads turning out for the court game, but these groups are not sprinkled with the necessary number of experienced men needed to build a championship five. However, from the large number of basketballers going through their preliminary paces each mentor is expected to select a team which will be fighting at the top of the conference. Very seldom is it that a bay quintet is not in the fore.

Marshfield has one real basket ball player around which the Pirate team must be built. This lad is Niel McLean, an all-county performer of the first water; last spring one of the outstanding individuals in the state tournament, not to mention his great play during the county meet. McLean is the lone man from the team which placed fifth at Salem in March, Liljeborg, Jacobson, G. Milosevich and Enlund having passed on through graduation.

Marshfield, however, has two promising players from last year's first string subs, Hansen and Atchison, who are expected to easily break into the varsity this season. This pair should team along in great shape with McLean, while from a group of "B" squaders Coach Osborn is expected to fill the other spots. One newcomer, Bjorqvist, has had some experience as a player at Redwood City, California, and before this at Coos River. He is being groomed for the center position.

Mr. Adams, North Bend's tutor of athletes, is not going to rest on the laurels gained when his Bulldogs won the football championship. As at Marshfield, North Bend is blessed by the return of but one regular for the entire season, though another, Hughes, will be on hand for the first semester. The one remaining letterman is John Mullen, who last season was runner-up to Harry Heimkin, for the "A" league scoring honors. But for this lanky, smooth-playing center, Adams has little experience on the squad, two first string reserves from the past team and the usual number of "B" fine lads completing the roster. Adams' "B" quintet was the best in the county last year, and from this group he is expected to look for his likeliest material. The situation at North Bend, though not too promising on paper, may develop some surprises before the schedule is long under way.

The dark horse team of the league is at Bandon where Coach Fasnacht is trying to whip a green Tiger squad into shape. Injuries have already beset the Bandon team, thus diminishing the chance that Fasnacht hoped his lads would have, but all in all, this dark horse outfit, cellar occupants for three years past, has a splendid opportunity of moving up in the league standing.

Mavin McCue, guard, is the lone letterman, reporting. The rest of the team is composed of reserves and second string men from last spring, while one newcomer, "Dutch" Breuer, from Santa Rosa High in California, completes the array of basket throwers. Breuer, six feet, four inches in height, has already made the first string as the center. Among the other performers, Helfferstine has been showing up with much surprising ability, in one pre-season fray with Port Orford, being high point scorer with eleven markers.

Of the "A" league teams Coquille, Bandon, and Myrtle Point have already seen action in pre-schedule games, which are expected to develop each quintet for the coming season. Of the non-conference games played Bandon has engaged in two, dropping her opener to the better conditioned Port Orford team, 30 to 22, but coming back in the next to swamp Langlois, 43 to 9. Myrtle Point dropped her one start to Schroeder's Independents by a 25 to 15 count, but in this fray the Bobcats were without the services of Shelton and McConnell, first string men.

Coquille lost her one game to the local Christian Endeavor quintet by a 27 to 17 score in a contest at the Community hall Tuesday night. The Endeavor team is composed of several ex-high school stars, and has had more opportunity for systematic practice than has the Red Devils' five. Coach Hartley used many players during the play, giving each performer his initial test. Collier and Shaver, as yet recuperating from the sick list, were not on hand to enter the fray. The lineup:

Why a Public Relations Program

Several phases of this question have already been discussed. It is not possible to touch all angles of such a topic—neither is it possible to deal in detail with every phase—but if the reading public gets the general problem before them, they are able to think through many local situations in the light of the needs and future of its schools.

Agin we need a public relations program to better understand and provide for our children.

The child at home lives under certain environments—certain rules and regulations—he has certain work to do. In his home environment the child reacts to a definite set-up. He responds to certain close relations which do not exist in any other situation of life. He is taught certain rules of etiquette and courtesy. He has certain reading materials available, certain books and music. The parents become intimately acquainted with their child in the home environment.

This same child is sent to school, an entirely different set-up. Thirty to forty children in his room represent different home environments. The child now comes in contact with a different form of organization. His reactions, his problems, and his progress are different. The parents are not intimately acquainted with the definite school reaction of their own child. The teacher is not at all acquainted with the home reaction of the child. As a result of this combination, which must be unified and strengthened, we have great need for an understanding between the home, school, and public.

A public program is able to bind closer together these two predominant forces which play on the child—the home and school. In the future it is the desire of the administration to work out some form of a report card on which the parents will answer certain questions with regard to the reactions of the child at home and the teacher will answer certain questions concerning the response of the child at school, blending the home report with the school report, both parent and teacher are able to do more for the child.

If at any time parents are in doubt as to certain information and certain procedure about questions please feel free to call the office of the superintendent and exact and definite information will be cheerfully given.

—Chester L. Ward, Superintendent.
