"George in a Jam" took away quite a bit of our attendance at the Flower Lovers Club Tuesday night, but at that we had enough out for a meeting. We also had several fine entries of mixed bouquets; the one which carried off the cup was one brought by the two Cardwell boys, Billie and Danny. It was a very attractive bouquet of daffodils, narcissi, trilliums and wild currant. These two boys are regular attendants and when we realize that they live on a homestead over a mile from town and have to walk at that, it certainly ought to make us all ashamed that we do not attend better and take more interest when we live right in town with street lights and sidewalks. Other fine entries were by Joy, Ruth and Roxie Pettengill, Mrs. Kern and Mr. Clinckbeard, whose narcissi were greatly complimented by Mr. Taylor.

 Mrs. Kern sketched the last two "Oregonian Garden Guide" pages which appear each week in the Sunday Oregonian. This page is of particular interest to all who like to work with flowers and I hope that other club members read it also.
 Mr. Taylor told us last night how to raise large-flowered, long-stemmed, fine colored daffodils. He said it was a matter of good bulbs and fertilization. He uses one part bone-meal flour, three parts sheep guano, one part finely ground peat. Now you folks, see what you can do.
 There was the usual discussion of culture of plants and bulbs and there is always much to be learned in these talks. One member has a good practical system, she takes notes during the evening and then transfers these to a notebook. We could all copy her example and not hurt us any. Our next contest is mixed bouquets in any kind of container. And remember we do not meet until 8 p. m. now during the summer. Next meeting on April 18th.
