conniving helped her city lover, Carson, to overcome parental objection.

Clarence Bean had a dual role, sometimes appearing as Carson's twin sister, and he put a lot of pep and action into all his appearances.

Mark Seeley also had a dual role and as the Frenchman pulled a lot of idiomatic French that even an European could understand.

In the end, Sara Jane got her Jack, George his Nellie and Gray his Ruth, and "Pop" taught "Ma" a lesson as to who was head of the family.

The F. F. A. ten-legged quartet rendered several most enjoyable selections between acts and responded to encores. The boys who sang were: Ernie Cooper, Delbert Donaldson, Jim Robinson, Russell Martindale and Bill Floten.

Miss Inez Rover, at the pipe organ, added greatly to the evening's entertainment with her selections before and immediately following the close of the play.
