Janet Gaynor in "Adorable" at the Liberty Theatre Here Sunday—Chic Sale in Preview Saturday Night

There's romance in good measure in the new Fox film with music, "Adorable," in which Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat, the foremost romancers of two continents, have the stellar roles. 2PC

Two of the most popular screen players in the world are co-starring in "Adorable," Fox Film romantic comedy with music, coming Sunday for three days to the Liberty Theatre.

They are Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat. Miss Gaynor, who has steadily climbed the ladder of popularity since her memorable performance in "7th Heaven," is admittedly the best magnet of all girls in pictures. Her productions are seen and heard by more persons throughout the world than those of any other actress.

Garat, on the other hand, is the most popular male star on the Continent where he has made pictures in English, French and German. Announcement of his name as a member of a cast is the equivalent of a sell-out at every European theatre.

Only his "Congresse Dances," in which he was co-starring with Lillian Harvey, another new Fox star, has been shown in this country, and he won instant and unanimous acclaim. Teamed with the popular Janet Gaynor in his first picture made in Hollywood, he is certain to become as popular in America as he is abroad. He is young and handsome, with a great amount of charm and excellent acting abilities.

braces, the rat-tat-tat of death-dealing machine guns and above them all, the friendship and hatred that flourishes between men engaged in flying to death—this, briefly, is "The Eagle and The Hawk," story of wartime aviation, which opens tonight at the Liberty.

Frederic March and Cary Grant play the two leading roles in the picture. Jack Oakie furnishes comedy interest and Carole Lombard romantic interest. Stuart Walker directed.

The story by John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings," centers around two wartime flyers who are an unbeatable combination in the air but the bitterest of enemies on the ground. March is the pilot, a brilliant, reckless flyer who can outmaneuver anything else in the air. Grant is the observer, a skilful, ruthless gunner, who can fill anything in sight with a load of deadly machine-gun bullets. Between them, they soon win fame and honor.

For tomorrow evening's eleven o'clock preview the Liberty presents that thrilling drama, "Dangerous Crossroads," featuring Chic Sale, the specialist, Jackie Searle, Diane Sinclair, and Frank Albertson. Everyone who has read Chic Sale's "The Specialist" composition, will want to see him at the crossroads.

Typhoid an Index of Community Intelligence

(Oregon State Board of Health)

How would you measure the intelligence of the community in which you live? Would your measuring stick be the number of schools, or the number of churches, or the miles of paved streets found within its boundary? Or would it be the degree of practical application of the laws of sanitary science? The sanitarian's yardstick is the number of cases of preventable communicable diseases which exist in the community. Cleanliness is next to godliness; they are one and inseparable. Freedom from infection and from pestilence gives rise to a healthy, vigorous community, which is further reflected in an increased number of schools, churches and other civic projects.

Typhoid fever is a filth borne disease. It is commonly spread by the contamination of food, particularly milk; and by contamination of water. It may also be fly borne, or transmitted through soiled linens or direct contact. Where the community intelligence level is low, the typhoid fever rate is high. The state of Oregon as a whole has shown a marked decrease in the number of cases and deaths from this disease in the past five years. This is evidenced by the following table:

Typhoid Fever in Oregon 1928-32
Year	Cases	Deaths
1928	189	27
1929	140	25
1930	177	18
1931	156	21

Typhoid fever is a preventable disease, and as such the 134 cases and 16 deaths in the past year are a severe indictment upon the intelligence of the people of Oregon. We know that milk and water are the common vehicles for typhoid infection. What have we done, what has your community done to make both of these necessities of life pure, and free from disease germs? What has your community done in the protection of its food supply from the filth of flies? What is the sanitary intelligence of your community? The answer is in the number of cases and deaths of typhoid found among your citizens.

Let us apply our knowledge of sanitation and rid Oregon of typhoid fever. Let us begin our long delayed projects of sewage disposal. Our rivers, our lakes and our wells have become grossly polluted because we have allowed filth to enter them. It is not too late to reclaim them and to return them to a cleanliness which existed before your community was settled. Low cost of materials, an abundant and eager supply of labor, and availability of financial help are all conspiring to make properly constructed sewage disposal plants within the reach of every community. Rid your community of typhoid fever.

Protect your milk supplies. Insist upon cleanliness not only of the barn, the milk house, or of the milk plant, but also a scrupulous cleanliness of the person of all those who engage in the production and distribution of the milk. Remember that properly pasteurized milk is the only safeguard against milk borne typhoid.

Community intelligence is but the sum total of individual intelligence. By your own observance of the laws of sanitation you can materially aid in further decreasing the typhoid fever rate in your community and in this state.

Nebraska Picnic

The tenth annual Nebraska Picnic will be held in the City Park (south edge of town on highway), Sunday, August 6th, at Corvallis. This picnic has always attracted many former Nebraskans. Last year over one thousand were in attendance, coming from Ashland on the south to Seattle, Washington, and The Dalles on the north and east. There are ninety counties in Nebraska and seventy were represented at the Corvallis picnic last year. Francis Ziegler, Corvallis, formerly of Monroe, Platte county, is president of the Nebraska Picnic Association and promises an interesting time to all who attend. A program of good music has been arranged; a prominent ex-cornhusker will deliver a thirty-minute talk and short, extemporaneous talks will be of interest to all. Free coffee. Former Nebraskans in Coos county are invited to attend.

A Blind Boy Arrested

Juvenile Officer A. T. Morrison brought over here from Allegany yesterday, Ernest Porter, a blind boy. He was arrested on complaint filed in the juvenile court by petition, and which was largely signed, that he was a bad influence among the children.

The boy lost his sight two or three years ago when a dynamite cap exploded. He has been at the asylum for the blind but escaped last spring, came home, and had been allowed to remain.

Sentenced to Six Months

Judge Latourette, of Oregon City, sitting on the Coos district court bench in the absence of Judge Brand, sentenced Clyde Goodman and Leon Weekly to six months in the county jail, Wednesday, the time they have been in jail since April 4 to count in the term served.

With the consent of Ben Flaxel, district attorney, the two young men were allowed to plead guilty to an assault and battery charge. They were indicted by the last grand jury on the charge of rape and the jury which heard a trial of the case against Goodman, failed to agree in Circuit court last month.

Floyd Griffey, who is serving a three year sentence in the pen after pleading guilty to the charge of rape, last month, has been in jail here since being brought from Salem as a witness in the Goodman trial.

Four Divorces Granted

Judge Latourette granted four divorces in Circuit court the past week. On Saturday he issued decrees to the plaintiffs in the cases of Myrtle A. Thorp vs. Wm. C. Thorp, and Beryl O. Sumerlin vs. Chas. D. Sumerlin, and on Monday to Lucille K. Perry separating her from Jas. O. Perry, and to Vernon Mackey who asked to be separated from Lucile Mackay.

Elmer Wilson Protests

Elmer Wilson, of Brewster valley, was in the Sentinel office Tuesday morning, and said he was the driver of the milk truck referred to in last Friday's issue of the Sentinel. He objected to the expression "hogging the road" which was used. We did not say he was a "road hog," which implies that a driver is using more than his half of the road. But what we did object was a driver's attitude that everyone must get out of a truck's way. When this writer's car met Mr. Wilson's truck a couple of weeks ago at a narrow bridge where two cars could not possibly pass, it was to us a case of stop or be hit—and we stopped. The truck did not slow up at all. Mr. Wilson says he would have gone off the bridge if necessary to avoid hitting us, but, of course, we did not know that. Further he says his brakes had been working perfectly before and also later, but they did not work when he tried them at the narrow bridge.

A due regard for the rights of others is all anyone can expect from the drivers of cars he meets, and we do not yet feel that Mr. Wilson gave this proper consideration when he drove at the speed he did, and could not stop.

No matter if he is careful to give half the road, as he claims he always does, it does not alter the feeling expressed by those who are not as familiar as he is with that narrow county road, that they are always uneasy when meeting that milk truck.

A Suicide at Empire

The coroner's jury on Tuesday declared the death of Ned Jones, at Empire to be a case of suicide.

He evidently had committed the deed in his cabin early Monday morning but the body was not discovered until the next morning.

A long, sharp knife was the instrument which Jones used. He had stabbed himself in the side twice, just missing the heart, had then slashed at his neck and finally cut his throat, severing the windpipe.

The pictures taken by the sheriff's force make a gruesome sight, but the interior of the cabin, smeared with blood, and somewhat upset, was much worse to look at than the pictures.

Jones served in the navy during the war and had been retired on a pension recently. For two years he had been with the compass station at Empire. His parents live in Texas.
