Do you know it is time to think about spring bulbs? Not just planting them, I mean, but what you expect to have blooming in the spring; for to have lots of bloom in the spring you must begin planting now and continue through September and October. Among the fall-planted bulbs are Crocus, Snowdrops, Tulips, Hyacinths, Lily of the Valley, Hemerocallis or Day Lily, Amaryllis, Chionodoxa or Glory of the Snow, Daffodils and Narcissus of various types, Sparaxis, Ixias, Scillas in various types, Muscari or Grape Hyacinths, which are among the lower growing bulbs. For the taller lilies, Lilium Tigrinum or Tiger Lily, the Speciosums, Henryi, Regale, the Easter lilies, Gigantum and Formosum, Pardalinum or Leopard Lily, Hansoni or Yellow Japanese Lily, Canadian Lily, Turke Cap Lily, Madonna Lily, Lilium Auratum, Ranunculus, Anemones and Amaryllis are best left for spring planting, although here, as a general thing, the anemones carry over the winter when fall planted. Lilium Elegans and Umbellatum are also fall planted.

In the "American Home" for September, 1933, there is a fine article on lilies from which I will give you some of the high lights; according to this article the Madonna lily should be planted not later than September, the others in October. As some bulbs ordered may not arrive until November or December, the ground should be ready for their planting as soon as they come. Auratum, Regale, Speciosums, Easter Lilies, Elegans, Hansoni, Henryi, Japanese, Tiger, Tenifolium, and Umbellatum are classed in the stem-rooting bulbs and should be planted from eight to twelve inches deep. In planting in borders or among other plants, one should be sure to plant them where they will not be choked out by other rapidly spreading plants. Lilies like lots of room and don't want to be crowded in the least. They also do better for some shade during the hottest part of the day, although the Amaryllis and the early spring bulbs want a sunny situation. A well drained, loamy soil is best for lilies and the bulbs should be placed on a layer of clean sand. Keep lime away from lilies; some like the Madonna, Elegans, Hansoni, and Tiger will grow regardless of lime in the soil, but the others resent it strongly. Here many have been troubled by a blight, particularly on the Madonna Lily; for this, I. George Quint, author of the above mentioned article, recommends a spray of Bordeaux mixture or other copper base fungicide. He also says that "a bulb once planted should remain undisturbed until it fails to bloom; in that event, dig it up, when dormant, clean it and remove scales." Your irises should also be planted in the fall and your German Iris attended to as soon as possible if you have not already done so.

It is also a good time to consider your sweet peas for next year's bloom and get your seed as soon as possible, so as to get them in this fall. The best sweet peas obtainable on the coast are to be obtained from Ferry-Morse Co., San Francisco. Mr. Morse had made a specialty of growing sweet peas and has done more to improve this lovely flower than any one I know of.

In the "American Home" there is also a good article, "Roses are better in Autumn," by J. H. Nicolas. It goes against the idea so generally accepted that roses are only for spring or June blooming and it goes into the matter thoroughly giving directions and varieties that anyone can follow. On the Drane house a few doors from my home, is a large Wisteria vine in full bloom. This is the second time this year it has been covered with great clusters of deep purple bloom, but the first time, it had no leaves, now the rich green leaves make a fine background for the purple bloom. It bloomed twice last year, but I thought then it was just a freak of the season. Now, I am beginning to think it is its nature.
