

KNEE-ACTION

tops a 22-year record of engineering progress that makes Chevrolet the best riding car in the low-price field

CHEVROLET Year after year, it's been the same story: Chevrolet FIRST with the NEWEST and BEST! Chevrolet leading—others following. Chevrolet out in front with the latest proved advancements. Self-starter! Sliding gear transmission! Streamlined design! It was Chevrolet aggressiveness and progressiveness that forced all low-priced cars eventually to adopt these and other major improvements. And now, this year, comes the climax of Chevrolet's engineering leadership: the Knee-Action ride! This newest of motoring sensations is a marvel of smooth, easy, gentle motion. No other ride in the world can even compare with it. It makes Chevrolet far and away the best riding car in the low-price field. Have you noticed how America has taken to the Knee-Action ride? In the first 6 months, demand for Chevrolet cars sent production to the highest total attained by any automobile during 1934.

Many Do Like Music

The Shakespearean dictum that the man who does not love music is "only fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils" does not hold water. There are many men who have grown up and helped the world along, who never had the opportunity of learning anything about music and who do not care about it, because they cannot appreciate its beauty.

Birds Lead to Fish

Fishermen often discover schools of fish by watching the sea birds that noisily pursue the fish for food.

An Eminent Gardener of Long Ago
We are apt to think of gardening as a modern activity, but gardening is older than history. We know little of its beginnings, except that thousands of years ago, men cultivated plants for their beauty and fragrance, as well as for more practical uses, and knew how to arrange them in gardens.

Still it is hard to get away from the idea that modern man has improved upon everything, including gardening and human nature, so I am going to ask you to go back with me in imagination to the seventeenth century in England and meet Sir William Temple. Sir William was born in 1628 and died in 1699.

Those were the days when education was applied only at the top of society and was supposed to percolate to the masses beneath. It sometimes did, depending upon the intelligence and sincerity of those at the top.

Sir William must have been one of the right sort, because his tastes were simple and his efforts helpful to others.

He was a statesman and a diplomat and had successfully carried through many great political enterprises. He was a highly educated and cultured man. After graduating from Cambridge, he traveled for six years on the continent, learning by actual contact about men and politics, nature and art. After that he went as an ambassador from one royal court to another.

All countries had royal courts then. The great revolutions had not been fought, and the modern republics did not exist. There was no United States of America—only a few settlements along the Atlantic coast. All the rest was a trackless wilderness as far as Mexico.

Conditions in Europe were quite different. There was much pomp and show and much extravagance among the upper classes. Sir William loved a quiet life, but his ability and education caused him to be sent by the government on many important missions. He was an honored as well as an honorable man, but as soon as he could free himself from the necessity for public service, he retired to his country estate at Moor Park, England. There he lived for five years without going to town once.

In his treatise "On Gardening," he writes: "For my own part, as the country life, and this part of it (gardening) more particularly, were the inclination of my youth itself, so they are the pleasure of my age.

I can truly say that among many great employments that have fallen to my share, I have never asked or sought for any of them, but often endeavored to escape from them; into the ease and freedom of a private scene, where a man may go his own way and his own pace in the common paths and circles of life."

Gardening in Sir William's time was "big business." England was divided into great estates, many of them far from the cities. An efficient means of rapid transportation had not yet been devised. Fresh fruit and vegetables could not be shipped long distances, therefore, if the owner of an estate and the persons dependent upon him were to have an abundant and suitable food supply, the estate must be made to produce it. Grapes out of season were grown in green-houses. Other methods of horticulture, which we know little about, were employed to produce fine fruit. Peaches, especially, were espaliered against a brick or stone wall, for extra warmth and protection from the weather.

Gardens were decorative also. Of the garden at Moor Park, Sir William writes: "It was the perfectest . . . I ever saw. It was made by the Countess of Bedford, esteemed among the wits of her time, . . . with great care, excellent contrivance, and much cost." But he cautions others that "greater sums may be thrown away without effect or honor, if there want sense in proportion to money, or if nature be not followed, which I take to be the great rule in this and everything else."

He enables us to visualize the gardens of his times when he suggests the most desirable form—"the best I esteem an oblong on a slope. The beauty, the air, the view, make amends for the expense which is very great in finishing and supporting the terrace walks, in leveling the patterns, and the stone stairs necessary from one part to another."

He thinks the tendency to increase the size of gardens is extravagant and says that "from four or five to seven or eight acres is as much as any gentleman need design, and will furnish as much . . . as any nobleman may have occasion to use in his family."

He writes about the soil, the drainage, the air, and his own satisfaction in following his natural inclination, and concludes, "When I am in this corner, I can truly say with Horace:—'Let me yet less possess, so I may live What e'er of life remains, unto myself. May I have books enough, and one year's store, Not to depend upon each doubtful hour This is enough of mighty Jove to pray, Who, as he pleases, gives and takes away.'"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sick and the world looks queer, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, or laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The cause for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a black, bad taste and your breath is foul. Bile often breaks out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes these good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "so good." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, bearing down to making the bile flow freely.

Don't let your liver suffer. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware of substitutes. Best drug stores. ©1934 C. M. Co.
