Leonard Ensele Plays for Lions

Leonard Ensele and his violin furnished one of the finest entertainments the Lions Club has enjoyed in a long time at their luncheon yesterday noon. He has an exceedingly true touch and technique and his three numbers were accorded the closest attention. Mrs. M. O. Hawkins accompanied him on the piano.

J. E. Norton, in explaining why he had to lock his car when he went out hunting recently, and inadvertently left the keys inside, said that he knew the hunter who brings home a meadowlark, or a mud hen, or what have you, as a duck, was in that section and he feared to leave a duck in the car, unprotected. Turkeys Setting in Winter

In Joe Knight's flock of turkeys on Catching creek above Myrtle Point, there is a young hen, last spring's hatch, which has little regard for the seasons. This bird stole her nest, half a mile up the mountainside, and was setting on fourteen eggs. Such a disregard for the time of year is practically unknown among turkeys, their setting period always being in the spring. The family had watched her slipping away and finally located the nest. Before destroying the eggs they noted that one was extra large and upon breaking it found it to be double-yolked, another very singular condition for a turkey egg.
