Job's Daughters' Parents Banquet Monday Evening

The Job's Daughters banquet, given in honor of their parents last Monday evening at the Masonic hall, was one of the nicest affairs of the many similar ones given in the city at this time. Starting with a banquet at 6:30 o'clock at long tables, made beautiful with white lilies and purple iris and ferns, the girls started their program with a song of greeting to their parents, this being followed by an address of welcome given by Miss Zelma Bossarman, honored queen of the Coquille Bethel. Other addresses were, "Tributes to Fathers," by Miss Leveille Walstrom and "A Tribute to Mothers," by Miss Dorris Compton, senior and junior princesses respectively of the local Bethel. Each was well delivered and gave evidence of careful study and sincere thought on the part of the "Daughters."

Miss Florence Sanford, guardian of the Bethel, and who has given untiringly of her time and efforts to assist in the organization's work here, was presented with a gift, by the honored queen, in appreciation of her valued services. Ernest Purvance, associate guardian and who now holds the office of grand guardian for the state, was also presented with a gift.

Following the banquet, the regular meeting was held upstairs, with three candidates receiving the initiatory degrees, these being Miss Cherie Mae Hartwell, Miss Evelyn Berry and Miss Margaret Belloni.

Mrs. Frances Holmstrom, Coquille's own poet, was asked to contribute some verse for the banquet program and, like all of Mrs. Holmstrom's poems, made a deep impression on those present. The poem follows:

THE TORCH IS PASSED
Parents, from you we accept it
As a high and holy trust.
We will keep it as you have kept it,
Out of the mire and the dust.
It shall be to our generation
As it has been yours, a light
Guiding the steps of nations
As they scale the untried height.
The future of the races
Is the trust we receive from you.
Fathers and mothers, trust us
To keep it burning true!
