Pictures at the Liberty The Coming Week

Reproducing a "face lifting" operation by make-up—

Building a state penitentiary—

Filming running fights between gangsters and secret service operatives at a speed of seventy miles an hour—

Driving an automobile through a flooded river—

These are just a few of the difficult location and technical details that went into the making of "Public Hero Number 1," a drama of the fight of the secret service against organized crime, which comes to the Liberty Theatre Friday and Saturday evenings.

Some of the most amazing thrills of automobile pursuit and battle ever filmed went into the new picture. Camera cars, carrying portable sound-recording apparatus as well as cameras sped down traffic-protected roads at breakneck speed, keeping two cars in range as the players staged a desperate battle. Cables connected microphones between cars and the portable recording machine to record dialogue, shots, and the roar of motors in the thrilling chase episodes. The story, based on actual cases, reports and happenings in the government's war against organized crime, was filmed with every attention to authenticity. The prison break scene, in which Chester Morris and Callela hold-up warden and prison board and escape in a prison car, closely followed, in general detail, an actual escape that recently figured in newspaper headlines. The trailing of the disguised public enemy, a dramatic factor in the story, was likewise dramatized directly from official reports and newspaper accounts.

"Public Hero Number 1" deals with the pursuit of a notorious public enemy by a government operative, with the weight of the secret service behind him. Much of the action occurs within a state penitentiary and its purse-stirring episodes, including the sensational jail break, are said to be the most realistic and exciting scenes of prison life to be photographed.

From the pages of Damon Runyon's new book of short stories, "Blue Plate Special," comes the plot for his new picture, "Hold 'Em Yale," which is shown as the preview tonight.

With Patricia Ellis, Cesar Romero, Larry Crabbe and William Frawley heading the cast, "Hold 'Em Yale" tells of a bunch of Runyon's Broadway "mugs" who take over a dizzy, young heiress with the idea of getting money from her father. Before the comedy climax of the picture arrives the boys are glad to get rid of the heiress and even help Yale win a football game over Harvard in order to insure her marrying the football hero.

Civilization marches westward over the turbulent Erie waterways in four-mile-an-hour boats and strong men hammered out an empire and held the love of beautiful women with their brawny fists.

That is the glamorous, action-filled picture of America in the roaring 1850's which "The Farmer Takes a Wife" brings Sunday to the Liberty Theatre. About the tender love story of Janet Gaynor and Henry Fonda, the stars of the picture; all of the excitement, humor, romance and near-tragedy of this never to be forgotten epoch centers. Miss Gaynor is a girl of the Erie waterways, fascinated by the nomadic, gypsy-like existence. Fonda is a boy who works on the canals merely to earn enough money to buy the farm he has always wanted. Although these two realize that there is this fundamental difference between them, they cannot help being drawn together by love. As the picture progresses, Fonda's fortunes prosper and he prepares to withdraw from the canal. But Miss Gaynor believes that he is running from Charles Bickford, the canal's bully, and his rival for her affection. In a pounding, action-filled climax, Fonda proves his courage and his right to Miss Gaynor's love.
