Black Panther Too Strong for Chinese Achiu

Jack Clayburn, the Black Panther, again proved too strong for the Chinese jiu jitsu artist, Walt Achiu, at Harry Elliott's wrestling card in the Community Building last Friday night, the negro winning the first and third falls.

Clayburn, with drop kicks, won the first in 14 minutes. Achiu took the second in three and Clayburn the final in seven minutes. There was plenty of action throughout, but it was remarkably clean for present-day wrestling.

Although the crowd was strong for Thor Jensen, of Elkton, in the semifinal, Bob Castle, one of the meanest of the meanies in the wrestling game, won the last two falls after Jensen had taken the first.

The preliminary was not so hot. Knute Franklin, present or past coach at Hill Military Academy, depending almost entirely on dirty stuff in his match with Dilly Davis. The latter gave Franklin the works for 17 minutes and then pinned him to the mat.

Mr. Elliott announces his next card for New Year's night, next Friday.

Christmas Tree Observations by Coquille Churches

The Episcopal Guild, church and Sunday School had their annual Christmas celebration in the Parish House Tuesday evening. It was preceded by a 6:30 o'clock dinner. After a sumptuous dinner there was a program consisting of a Christmas pageant by the children. This was followed by the appearance of Santa with gifts for the children. About eighty-two enjoyed this festive occasion.

The Pioneer church had its Christmas program and tree in the church auditorium Tuesday evening. The church was beautifully decorated with resplendent Christmas trees, festooning, potted poinsettias and other emblematic decorations. A short program by the children, consisting of a Christmas pageant, recitations and group singing, was most entertaining. This was followed by a visitation of a very jolly Santa, who distributed gifts for the children.

The Christian Church was ringing to the tunes of good old Christmas carols last Sunday night preceding the regular church service. The Y. P. C. A. group accepted the Christian Endeavor's invitation to meet with them at their regular meeting that night. A brief regular meeting was conducted by the C. E.'s for the whole group, including a fine interpretation of Charles Dickens' memorable "Christmas Carol," by Emma Frances Mukey, followed by the singing of carols by Bob Wagner. The group intends to try, at least, to serenade the many homes of those who have their names on the various church lists as well as others.

Hi School Assembly Wednesday

Coquille High finished its activities for 1936 Wednesday afternoon with a program. A short address by Mayor J. Arthur Berg, on "Christmas," and three selections by Miss Dae's ensemble featured the program. The ensemble rendered "The world is waiting for the sunrise," "The Brownies" and "Come to the fair," in a most creditable manner which evoked hearty applause.

A Girls League playlet, music by the assembly and by the Glee club were other numbers on the program.

Supt. Lane presented the home room banner for the semester to Mrs. Ruth Beyers' room and also a special prize for its appearance.

Special mention was also given Miss Stahl's department for the neatness and appearance of its room.

Highway Commission Again to Advertise Oregon Highways

As in 1936 attention of all the nation will be called to the scenic and recreational attractions of the Oregon coast country and its magnificent highway in the 1937 advertising and publicity program planned by the Travel department of the Oregon state highway commission. However, the 1937 program will be multiplied in intensity and value for the coast country and the rest of the state, because the highway commission has doubled the amount to be spent in the new year— earmarked $100,000 for this work.

By magazine, newspaper, radio and other means the attractions of the coast country and other sections of the state will be set forth to the people of the United States and Canada. The scope and continuity of the program planned means that virtually every potential vacationist in the United States and Canada will read or hear of the wide variety of attractions Oregon offers.

Volume of non-resident traffic on Oregon's highways as indicated by the records of the office of the Secretary of State was up nearly 40 per cent for the first eleven months of 1936 as compared with the corresponding period of 1935. Based on expenditure factors and average length of stay by visitors in 1935, those who came to Oregon by private automobile from other states and countries in 1936 spent not less than $18,000,000 in Oregon, according to figures compiled by the Travel department of the commission.

And these visitors left in the neighborhood of $750,000 in the form of gasoline taxes, money that is used in the building and maintaining of Oregon's highways.

"This gasoline tax income from foreign car traffic is vitally important," it is pointed out by Henry F. Cabell, chairman of the Oregon highway commission. "It is around ten per cent of the total intake from gasoline taxes. Improved major highways permitting our visitors to travel over the state are essential in increasing our foreign car travel. More and better major arterial highways mean an added attraction for visitors and consequently an added volume of travel with its consequent general benefit to all the state."

Mr. Cabell and the other two members of the commission, E. B. Aldrich of Pendleton and Judge F. L. Tou Velle of Jacksonville, have pointed out that the spending of a minor sum of the highway department's funds in the promotion of new travel for Oregon's highways is in no sense a diversion of funds but a logical expenditure which brings multiplied returns direct to the highway fund and simultaneously millions of added dollars to the general business channels of the state.

During 1936 the Travel department in its campaign to bring added visitors to Oregon printed and distributed more than 200,000 pieces of maps and literature setting forth attractions of the state. For 1937 more than 300,000 pieces are planned to push forward a "Drive Oregon Highways" campaign. In addition, the department likely will distribute more than 100,000 other folders and leaflets covering in detail specific attractions or areas—pieces published by regional associations, chambers of commerce and resorts.

"The department endeavors to answer completely all questions asked by prospective visitors to give them every possible bit of information that will turn them into actual visitors for Oregon," explained Harold B. Say, the Travel department director. "Approximately 40,000 inquiries were answered in 1936 and literature was distributed through about 1000 travel bureaus."

A group of a dozen men from over the state, all of whom are keenly aware of the value of tourist traffic, act as an advisory committee to the highway commission in its travel promotion endeavor. The coastal region of Oregon is represented on the body by Ed. W. Miller, manager of the Oregon Coast Highway association, Marshfield; and Merle Chessman, editor of the Astorian-Budget, Astoria.

Oregon High in Life Insurance

Five per cent of the average Oregon family's income now goes into a life insurance estate, reports J. E. Cook, representative of the Oregon Mutual Life Insurance company. "The proportion of income being paid into life insurance is growing steadily as economic recovery picks up," he said.

"Oregon puts a bigger share of its income in life insurance than does the state of Washington, where the average family's annual insurance investment is 4.8 per cent of its income."

Quoting figures released by the Spectator, insurance trade journal, he pointed out that the average Oregon family has accumulated an insurance estate of $2,069. In this figure Oregon trails Washington, whose average family has a life insurance estate of $2,431.

Oregon is at precisely the mid-way point among states of the union in the amount of life insurance possessed by the average family, standing 24th in the list of 48. This state is three positions behind Washington, which stands 21st.

Last year the average Oregon family invested in $272 of new insurance, and paid on an average premium of $77.
