

Reasons for Not Moving Library at This Time

(Continued from Page One) for the library costing some ten thousand dollars, or a new and adequate housing for the city fire department. That decision must soon be made. Should a larger and busier fire department be permanently quartered across the street from Coquille's fine new hospital? A bit jangling to the nerves of the unfortunate sick-abeds. The present fire engine room could be made into a very acceptable addition to our library with practically no expense. A reading room on the ground floor would be a fine thing for the town. A number of readers have been denied the use of the library because it entails climbing a long flight of stairs. A children's story room and a study above would be a great convenience to the school children. A convenient resting place would afford hospitality to our out-of-the-city shoppers. We must have fire protection. Our city need a library. To ignore either need is unthinkable. Let's build an adequate building for our fire department and care for the needs of the library at the same time. The state is preparing to spend a large sum of money for a new state library building. We must be equipped to take advantage of this, by being able to care for and use more and more of the state's books, and by being able to attract larger numbers of readers and students. A public institution, an educational facility, a civic necessity is at stake. How will the problem be solved?

Skeleton Discovered in Field

While ploughing in a field at some distance from his home Thursday morning, Forrest Hermann, of Broad-bent, unearthed parts of a skeleton and immediately notified the county coroner of his discovery. Dr. R. H. Mast, of Myrtle Point, was deputized to conduct an investigation and Elton Schroeder and L. L. Powers were immediately dispatched to the scene. Unlike a skeleton found a few years ago at a Gaylord ranch, this one is likely not that of a redskin survivor of Indian Wars, but instead is thought to be a more or less recent death owing to the fact that the skull and head are intact, the teeth are in good shape, and quite a few of the bones are still well preserved.—M. P. Herald.

Senior Class Play Was Heartily Enjoyed Tuesday

(Continued from Page One) daughter of a well-to-do family, who captured the shy youth, failed in no particular whether as a cleaning maid or as queen of the ball. Dorothy Glaisyer, with Hollywood ambitions, told very forcibly the anguish which failure to make the screen brings, and her lover, George Kloster, was as typical a Bowery bad boy as one could wish. Frank Biasca, father of the shy one, whom he could not compel to fall for the girl of pater's choice, was a scheming old rascal who finally gave in gracefully. Georgia Sherwood was the pretty choice of dad but she finally succumbed to the charms of Alfred Tenneyson Murgatoyd, played by Robert McGilvery, whose poem to a goat on a mountain was a gem of purest ray serene. Robert put into his playing all the eccentricities of the slightly cracked poet. Ellen Bloomquist, the "cullud wash lady," could not be induced to become a lady's maid and Kenneth Waggoner was the suitor and winner of the shy one's aunt. After a performance of comedy and fun the curtain descended with three couples waiting only the words of a marrying parson to make them happy for life.
