ALIENS TRYING TO BEAT GOV. MARTIN

Gov. Chas. H. Martin in his radio speech Tuesday evening pointed out the number of outside dictators who are attempting to tell Oregon voters whom they must choose as the democratic candidate for governor. Nor did he neglect paying his respects to the "jumping jack" editor of the Coos Bay Times whom he referred to as a "reputed friend of labor of the Jno. L. Lewis type."

State Capitol News Letter

On the eve of Oregon's primary election the outcome of a number of major contests remain very much in doubt. About the only point on which all political commentators seem able to agree is that Friday's balloting will bring out the largest vote ever recorded at a nominating election in this state. Especially is the democratic vote expected to be heavy in view of the intense interest manifested in the gubernatorial race. Of the 248,169 Democrats who are registered it is predicted that approximately 150,000 or 60 per cent will go to the polls.

like an easy winner over Robert N. Stanfield.

The 3600 officers and men of the Oregon National Guard who are to participate in the annual maneuvers at Camp Clatsop June 14 to 28 will not go hungry. There will not only be plenty of food but lots of variety. Bids were opened at Guard headquarters this week for 150 tons of food stuffs for the annual encampment.

The Oregon Board of Control does not propose to be caught napping if and when President Roosevelt launches his next pump priming experiment. Instructions have been given to begin the rounding up of state projects that might qualify for federal grants.

Since the national administration launched its new spending proposal it has begun to be whispered around in official circles that Oregon needs another new office building in Salem. This need has been apparent for some time but because of the state's financial condition no serious consideration has so far been given to it as a project of the immediate future.

Restriction of the sale of beer and wine, as well as hard liquor, to state liquor stores, is proposed by the Oregon Anti-Liquor League in an initiative measure filed with Secretary of State Snell this week. The measure would also limit sales of these liquors to holders of liquor permits and sales of all liquors would be restricted to original packages not to be consumed on the premises.

The Board of Control has agreed to ask the State Highway Commission for an appropriation of $3000 to finance a program of roadside beautification. The program is being sponsored by the Oregon Roadside Council. Money set aside for this purpose by the state will be matched by the federal government, a committee from the Council told the Board at a meeting here this week.

Employees in all state institutions will be placed on a 44-hour week basis next year if recommendations to be made by Governor Martin meet with approval of the legislature. Most institution employees now work 12 hours a day for six days a week. The governor's proposal for a shorter work week will practically double the number of employees at some institutions.

Oregon's Potential Market in Orient

(By Portland C. of C.)

Down the Columbia river and out from the Oregon coast ports there passes a diversity of commodities to foreign market which is rare among the producing areas of any seaport section of the country. From 500,000 to 700,000 square miles of productive land, forest areas and mining properties the water level route leads to tide-water through the Columbia and Oregon coast ports.

Lumber and timber products head the list of exports, both in volume and value. During the period from 1921 to 1935 this Oregon country sent to foreign markets approximately 4,000,000,000 feet cut from the enormous forests of the region.

The foreign market for lumber from the whole of the Pacific Northwest used to run up to 20 per cent of the annual cut, but through adverse conditions developing in our region within late years, has dropped now to nine per cent of the total cut. These adverse conditions are found in the costs of producing such products in the Pacific Northwest.

In what is termed the Columbia Gateway territory dependable authorities report there is a stand of timber equivalent to something like 500,000,000 tons. Under the normal marketing program about one-half of the annual cut from this stupendous stand of timber should reach consumers via deep-sea transportation lines and the other half would be handled by the railways to what is termed the heavy dependence of the lumber industry upon water transportation.

Three thousand cubic feet of air is the amount you and I must get in and out of our lungs each hour. Seven pounds of air per day go into our lungs and five go out again. Two pounds of oxygen go through the lungs into our blood to transform our food into energy and heat for the whole body.

The humid climate with abundant moisture and equable temperatures lead to a rapid reproduction of our forest wealth west of the Cascade Mountains and a fairly rapid reproduction in the region east of the Cascade Range. Actual measurements of regrowth have been made and it is found that nature restocks these forests at an amazing speed.

erations for this region will find our forest wealth one of its great assets and a joy and comfort to all of civilization. All of our people should be keenly alert in the cause of carrying on these three most important phases of work.

In the past an all too high percentage of forest wealth of this region has been shipped out in form of practically raw material. Remanufacture should be encouraged and particularly the development of those industries that use what otherwise is a wood waste. The largest line of industry which can accomplish this end is that of manufacturing our proven pulp-wood species into pulp.

The present abundant cheap hydro energy throughout the region where our forests occur, the wonderful living conditions for our people who may work in these industries, the cheap cost of producing foods and the marvelous opportunity for a full free life are found here.

Japan has proven the largest and the most potent buyer for forest products that may be found in any country of the Orient. This is due to the fact that Japan has modernized her industry, which necessitates diversified and heavy buying despite her own very greatly increased production of the various commodities.

Other world markets will also develop, but because of the Pacific Coast's proximity to the Orient and the great population existing there, the natural foreign trade outlet for our heaviest forest products industries should be looked to on the other side of the Pacific.
