

Large Crowd Enjoys Two-Part Musical Program

Over 100 attended the splendid two-part program presented by Mrs. Maud Woodyard in the Pioneer Methodist Church auditorium Tuesday evening.

The latter part of the program was a short musical comedy entitled, "The Quest of the Gypsy," sung by 18 high school girls.

This recital completed the work of the Rhythm Band and the group of singers for the term.

The school girls presented Mrs. Woodyard with a beautiful etching, also two lovely hankies.

Mrs. Fox' Pupils in Recital

Mrs. Roy Fox presented her pupils in an open class demonstration of the "Dunning System" at the I. O. O. F. hall Tuesday evening.

A few piano solos completed the program. Those taking part were: Margaret Ann and Helen Wilson, Phyllis and Jimmy Bunch, Mary Alice Nosler, Alice June Fox, Nancy Godard, Susanne Kruger, Ann Harbison, Mary Boone, Patricia Overton, Bernice and Norma Helvey, Dorothy Jean Hughes and Bonita Miller.

President of Humane Society Tells Plans

At present I am posting the county, offering a reward of $100.00 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone putting out or disposing of salmon or salmon heads where dogs may get them.

This includes all other types of poison as well. The streams are being posted cautioning people that fish caught in these streams are poisonous to dogs and no parts must be left lying around.

Monday we establish dog control in Coquille and at that time all dogs running at large will be picked up and taken to the county shelter on Sanford Heights.

Those interested in the epidemic of dog poisoning which has been sweeping Coos county for some time, will possibly enjoy what I have to say on this matter if they will turn the dial of their radio to KOOS Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Tuesday night the council of Marshfield tabled, until the need should arise, our offer to add Marshfield to the list of Coquille and North Bend as a field for dog control and the extension of the humane society work to that city.

I wonder how the citizens feel about it. I do know that after thoroughly explaining our work to the business and professional people of Marshfield, over 85 per cent of them have taken life membership cards in the society, and to our members there I wish to say that at all times, day or night, we are at their service.

Grange Council at Myrtle Point

The Coos county Grange council met with Myrtle Grange in Myrtle Point Tuesday evening at eight o'clock, the president, Ervin L. Peterson, in the chair.

About sixty member were present with Myrtle, McKinley, Greendell, Bridge, North Bayside and Coquille granges represented.

During the evening Myrtle grange initiated two members in the first degree.

Round table discussion were held in groups with Pomona masters, lecturers and secretaries leading.

Mrs. Beth Culver, lecturer, reported much activity in the home beautification contest with valuable prizes being offered by various paint companies.

The president asked each grange to select one agricultural project and carry it through the year.

On an invitation from McKinley grange, the council voted to meet with them Sept. 24.

Delicious refreshments were served by Myrtle grange.

Calling cards. 50 for $1.00.

Former Coquille Man Interviewed in Hawaii

There are hundreds of people in Coquille now who never heard of J. P. Michels, who was employed by the Mt. States Power Co. here some 20 odd years ago, but those who did know "Mike," and his genial smile, will read with interest the following clipped from a Honolulu paper last month:

Greta Garbo's feet are some shakes. They cover a lot of ground in a few steps. But Greta, of movie fame, isn't in it with James P. Michels, foreman, pole and line department, Hawaiian Electric Co., Ltd.

Mr. Michels has had his ins and outs he said today, with his No. 12 shoes, but the worst "out" was during the World war. He couldn't get any shoes large enough to fit him until a congressman came to his help.

But that's our story. Recalling those days, Jim said:

"I was a sergeant in the 29th engineers, company B, unattached. It was my duty to go into No Man's land with range finding equipment to spot the enemy artillery. Took a heap of shank's mare footing it across that area with my No. 12 brogues. It was dangerous.

"You might say I had one foot in the grave all the time.

"But what I'm getting at is that the supply officer kept pouring me No. 12's when what I needed was 12's.

"The old saying goes 'if the shoe fits, wear it!' But I had to try to wear it even if it didn't fit.

"I stuck it out till winter rolled around. Then with the cold weather coming on, I got chilblains on top of my bunions. It was awful.

"How would you like to have been in my shoes?"

We shuddered.

"So then I went to my general and he told me that if I couldn't get a fit, for me to get a pair of satchels made that would. He expected me to foot the bill.

"That made me hopping mad from the soles of my feet up. I sat down and wrote to my congressman, Willis Chatman Hawley of Oregon: 'Congressman, I've voted for you and I'm fighting for you. What about helping me? The army won't issue me enough shoe leather to cover my bunions. If I get killed by a Boche, I want to die with shoes on which will fit my whole foot including my toes.'

"Congressman Hawley must have kicked up a fuss, because I got my shoes—four pairs of them. Every one of them fit... they felt grand."

It was, of course, no small feat to get the feet fitted by a congressman.

Not all of Jim's length, by any means, turned out for feet. He is 6 feet, 2 inches.

When asked whether his shoes ever got in his way and held him back, he looked wistful. "Yes," he said, "it kept me from skipping rope with the boys. I minded that more than the lack of dancing.

THE PIPER PLAYS... Jeannette MacDonald sings in this hitting scene from "The Girl of the Golden West" Buddy Ebsen is the piper.

MASKED BANDITS On a visit to the padre in Monterey, Mary's stage coach is held up by the notorious bandit, Ramerrez, and his henchman, but Mary outwits them by hiding her gold in a papoose basket. Stricken by Mary's beauty, Ramerrez permits the coach to continue but follows her to Monterey. In the scene above are Nelson Eddy and Leo Carrillo.

THE PROOF Sheriff Jack Rance (Walter Pidgeon) produces evidence which proves that Lieutenant Johnson is in reality the notorious bandit, Ramerrez.

LULLABY Jeannette MacDonald sings a lullaby to a little Indian papoose. The song, "Shadows on the Moon," is one of eight new songs hits heard in "The Girl of the Golden West." The new songs were composed by the famous writing team of Romberg-Kahn.

A FAMOUS TEAM Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are reunited for the fourth time in "The Girl of the Golden West," based on the memorable David Belasco stage play. The story, laid against the background of the California Sierras, tells of a girl who loses her heart to a notorious bandit.

SINGING CHIEF... Nelson Eddy as Ramerrez, leads his robbey caravan over the mountain passes. Dreaming of the next stage-coach holiday, the bandits join battle in singing "Soldiers of Fortune."
