Quick as Lightning
The muscles of the eyelid are the quickest-acting muscles in the body. That is the reason the eye is so seldom injured. No matter how fast a blow or how sudden, the eyelid closes before the blow lands, and the action is instantaneous.

Where "Strad" Violins Were Made
Violins by Antonius Stradivarius were not made in Germany but in the town of Cremona on the River Po in northern Italy. They were made more than 200 years ago, his best ones being turned out between the years 1700 and 1725.
