Buick Third in Sales

Buick's forward strides in sales during the past year have resulted in the award to this manufacturer of choice third position in the allotment of space at the 1939 National Automobile Show in Grand Central Palace, New York, according to word received today by Cliff Gulseth, manager of the local Buick agency, from W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager.

"When the annual automobile show opens this fall, the spotlight will be on Buick because of this distinction," Mr. Gulseth said. "According to the information from Mr. Hufstader, choice of space is granted by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, which sponsors the New York show, on the basis of the dollar volume of sales by members of the association during the twelve months ended May 1. By virtue of having achieved the third greatest dollar volume during the period, Buick wins the right to one of the choicest display spaces in the great exposition hall."

Mr. Gulseth said the Buick shift to third position will constitute the major change in arrangement of displays at the National Automobile Show this year. Buick climbed to its present place from sixth position last year, he said.

How Times Change

Recent relief appropriations by congress at the urgent request of President Roosevelt recall this statement made in the president's first inaugural address which makes interesting reading now. Said the president on March 4, 1933: "The unscrupulous money changers, faced by the failure of credit, have proposed only the lending of more money?"

Oregon's Export Trade

[This is the sixth in a series of articles on Oregon's export trade presented by the Portland Chamber of Commerce.]

Every county, almost every community in Oregon, must be interested in the volume of Oregon products that enters export trade, and practically every section of the state contributes something to it. So varied are the resources of Oregon—ranging from lumber and staple food crops to medicinal herbs and barks—that markets are found in every channel of domestic and foreign commerce.

While wheat was the first general crop grown in the Willamette Valley, this fertile country has turned in recent years more to diversified farming, dairying, fruits and nuts. Umatilla, Wasco, Sherman, Morrow and Gilliam have become the leading wheat counties, their production in 1930 totaling 13,203,487 bushels, a considerable part of which entered export trade in the form of flour. In 1935, government figures gave a value of $22,998,368 to the flour and grain mill products of the state.

From the Hood River district and other contributing orchards there was gathered in 1937 3,763,000 bushels of apples with a value of $4,075,000. Rogue River valley is the next heavy apple producing area. Much of this fruit is shipped abroad and the prosperity of apple growers fluctuates with the changing foreign demand and price.

Yamhill county leads in the production of prunes and plums, of which there are 4,362,862 trees in the state with a 1937 marketed crop of 56,000 tons valued at $1,429,000. Removal of foreign trade barriers set up since the World War might easily double this market.

Pears from Medford, Hood River, and White Salmon areas and peaches from various parts of the region, because of their excellent quality, are finding constantly widening markets at home and abroad. In 1937 the Oregon production of peaches was 241,000 bushels with a wholesale value of $250,000.

In the production of filberts Oregon and southern Washington are supplanting the Mediterranean countries, hitherto the chief source of supply in the world. Local production in 1937 was 2,230 tons, with Washington county leading and Yamhill a close second. The crop was valued at $472,000. Yamhill leads, with Washington county second, in the production of walnuts, the distinctive flavor of which gives them secure place in the market. Marion, Lane, Clackamas and Polk counties also are heavy walnut producers and altogether there are 480,299 trees in the state.

From Curry and Coos counties come the only commercial supply of western white cedar on the North American continent. It is one of the highest priced softwoods in the world and much of the Oregon output is taken by Japan.

More than 25 per cent of Oregon's gainfully employed are engaged in manufacturing and mechanical lines, while 20 per cent of its people are dependent upon agriculture. Their success in large measure is dependent upon the uninterrupted flow of Oregon products through Oregon ports to the markets of the world; and with their success greater prosperity is assured all the varied businesses, professions and wage-earners in the state.
