77th Annual State Fair
Opens At Salem Monday

The 77th annual Oregon state fair opening at Salem Labor Day for seven days promises to be the best ever, according to Leo G. Spitzbart, fair manager.

More than $30,000 in prizes are scheduled in the premium list.

New buildings include a stock barn, a $60,000 WPA project, which is nearly large enough to accommodate a blimp. It is 243 feet wide and nearly 500 feet long. It houses 800 cattle. Then there is the recently-opened $11,000 administration building. Two new speed barns, south of the paddock, increase the racing stable space to 240 horses.

In addition to a six-day afternoon racing program, there is a horsemeshow scheduled for six nights, with prize money totaling $6,000. An added feature is a bucking exhibition of wild horses from Eastern Oregon. The broncs will be saddled in the arena to add to the thrills.

Admission will be 50 cents up to 6 p. m. and 25 cents thereafter. Children under 12 are admitted free.

An almost continuous free show from early morning until midnight is promised—an inventors' show, motion pictures, entertainment before the grandstand and dancing. Les Hite and his 14-piece Cotton club Negro orchestra from New York will play for a free dance every night.

Gould To Attend The Preview

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Gould, of the Gould Furniture Co., are leaving for Portland next week to attend a preview exhibit of the largest line of bedroom and dining room furniture ever produced by a western manufacturer.

The preview will be at the plant of the Doernbecher Manufacturing Co., September 6-10. According to Mr. Gould this is one of the largest furniture plants in the world. The preview is a showing of more than 50 new designs. The Gould Furniture Co. have featured Doernbecher furniture for many years and are proud of the part that this store has played in helping build up one of the largest industrial enterprises in the West, the local merchants' state.
