Safety Driving School at C.H.S.

Plans for a seven-week series of safe driving classes similar to those held in many Oregon communities last winter are being formulated here this week by a representative from the office of Secretary of State Earl Snell, co-operating with B. W. Dunn, Coquille school superintendent, and others interested in safety work.

Separate classes for high school students and for adults will be formed. The instruction is designed to train the students in all fundamentals of automobile operation.

Announcement of the location and the time and place for registration will be made soon, according to Snell. The first class will be scheduled shortly after the opening of the public schools, with six one-hour periods following at weekly intervals. Students are required to furnish their own cars for practice driving.

Registration will be open to all persons 15 years of age or older and the instruction will be free of charge. The students will be shown what steps they must take to drive their automobiles properly, and will then go through these steps at the wheels of their cars, from the simplest movements to the most complex. Those who obtain learners' permits will have an opportunity to take a practice drive before the conclusion of the school.

For continuance of the safe driving schools throughout the state.

"We have received whole-hearted support and assistance from school and public officials wherever we have held the schools," Snell declared. "This year we hope to exceed last year's record of conducting schools in 46 communities and graduating nearly 1800 students."

The schools are being counted on to create proper driving habits and attitudes among Oregon's drivers. These classes are conducted by regular examiners, assisted by local officials and citizens interested in traffic safety.

More Books Can Be Repaired

The girls who are working on the WPA book repair project in the court house will be able at this time to handle more school library books as they have nearly finished the ones on hand. Books should be sent to the office of the county school superintendent at once.

"Lord Jeff" At Liberty Theatre
Friday, Saturday And Sunday

Mickey Rooney and Freddie Bartholomew in "Lord Jeff"

Although when Alaska is mentioned the average person thinks immediately of frozen icecaps, mushing dog teams, furs and timber, actually the fishing off the Ketchikan archipelago is one of the Territory's principal industries and has yielded more wealth than all the precious metals ever mined in America's last frontier region!

This industry, which is as packed with drama, action and romance as any gold strike in the Yukon, is made the subject for an epic motion picture for the first time in "Spawn of the North." Paramount's panoramic drama of Alaska, coming next Sunday to the Roxy Theatre. To show that it meant business in portraying this phase of Alaskan life, Paramount selected an all-star cast headed by such favorites as George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour and John Barrymore and put it under the direction of Henry Hathaway, the man who made "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Souls at Sea."

What makes Alaskan fishing so fraught with romance and drama is the fact that in this untamed frontier region piracy still flourishes. According to Director Hathaway, who made an exhaustive study of the situation, piracy thrives in Alaska under the protective wing of the public itself because of a peculiar institution. The inhabitants of the Territory contend that the "meadows of the sea" have been in the public domain since time immemorial and that the United States is not justified in parceling them out to big syndicates, as is often the case. The valuable salmon come from warm southern seas every spring, in answer to the imperative call of procreation, and travel thousands of miles under sea to their native spawning grounds. No one, the pirates maintain, has the right to fence off a portion of the sea to trap them, and so if the pirates find salmon in a trap they take it without compunction.

"As a result," Hathaway relates, "the native privately sympathize with the pirates, and even when the evidence is overwhelming it's a rare occasion when an Alaskan jury convicts a salmon pirate. However, the pirates remain social outcasts. In Alaska there's a strong line of demarcation between the good and bad. And once you're on the wrong side of the line you stay there, no matter to which part of Alaska, you move."

Coquille Eagles

Coquille Aerie, No. 2198, F. O. E., held an interesting and largely attended meeting last Thursday evening. Dr. Stark, the newly appointed aerie physician, was installed and Brother Higgenbotham was also installed as worthy chaplain. J. N. Jacobsen, past worthy president, presided during the installation ceremony.

A committee was appointed to attend the next meeting of the city council to urge that repairs be made at the city dock and that rollers be installed for the purpose of launching and dry docking fishermen's boats. It was pointed out that many tourists would take advantage of the opportunity to put their boats in the river at Coquille in pursuit of salmon and to indulge in trout fishing. This means more money in the pockets of Coquille merchants.

"Oscar," the duck mascot of the local Aerie is "on the loose." He escaped from his keeper and is now enjoying the fishing in the Coquille river. "Oscar" was responsible the last month in adding 20 new members to the Aerie, so it was decided to allow her her freedom in view of the good work she has accomplished. The steering committee is devising a new and persuasive method for bringing in new members which will be announced shortly.

Fred Bull was appointed to contact all civic organizations relative to a charity ball to be given sometime this fall. The proceeds of this dance will all go for the purpose of purchasing Christmas baskets, etc., for the poor people of the community during the holiday season. The Eagles are sponsors of this worthy cause and will appreciate the co-operation of all organizations along this line.

Ray Gilkey's disappearance from the aerie has been solved. He is hiding out behind a flock of whiskers, down on the lower river. His reasons for going into hiding are the same as usual and always—the fish are striking. Ray is not the only one with the fishin' fever. Frank Ball, worthy president, "parked" a jack-salmon in the ante room before taking up the gavel at the last meeting.
