

Pomona Grange Met At Fairview Tuesday

A small but interested group of Grangers met with Fairview-North Fork Grange Tuesday, Pomona Master Ervin L. Peterson, of Haynes Inlet, presiding.

Among the resolutions receiving a favorable vote were: one for retaining the county agent's office, one for the home demonstration agent and the program recommended by the County Dairymen's association regarding the control of Bang's disease. The results of the Home Beautification contest will be announced at the January meeting. Several merchants in Coquille and Myrtle Point have offered prizes for the contest.

The literary program consisted of group singing of "Smiles" and "Harvest March," an expression from each Pomona officer as to what he had to be thankful for and a guitar solo by Benny Sønneiland.

The grange voted to present a gift to the Nebraska State Master, C. L. Dietz, who is to be special guest of Coos County Pomona grange at a banquet during the National Grange session in Portland in November.

The grange will hold its next meeting with McKinley the second Tuesday in January.

Parkersburg Picnic Sun. Rain Or Shine

Next Sunday, October 16, is the date set for the gathering of all the old-timers of the Parkersburg district in one grand reunion at the Parkersburg school grounds on Bear Creek and even though it should rain, no one will care for everybody will just move inside the playshed where there is plenty of room and continue to have a good time. All who live at Parkersburg or ever have lived there, their families and friends are cordially invited. A big picnic dinner is planned and a committee from the Parkersburg Community Club which is sponsoring it is working on a suitable program for the day.

The picnic will mark the close of the drive for names for the historical quilt which the club is making and which will be given away later. The quilt top, pieced in the wheel of fortune pattern and which will be on display in the playshed next Sunday, will carry as many names of Parkersburg residents, past and present, as can be obtained. Reading the list of these names, of which there are about three hundred now, is most interesting and brings up many memories of the years gone by.

Farm Security Aids Family-Sized Unit

Many small farms in Coos and Curry counties, although able to support a family if properly managed, are unable to carry the modern equipment, purebred sires and other facilities necessary to compete with production costs on larger units. Farm Security loans have already been made to 150 farmers in this district to place family-sized farms on an efficient operating basis, according to D. R. Winn, county FSA supervisor, Court House, Coquille, Oregon.

Sufficient operating capital through an FSA loan is the first step in assisting the farmer unable to secure sufficient commercial credit. Where indebtedness is beyond capacity of the farm to pay, every attempt is made to secure friendly adjustments between debtor and creditor.

Second step in bringing advantages of larger units to the smaller farmer is through farm and home plans that provide for business-like methods of operation, including keeping of accounts, setting up budgets for each year and taking an annual inventory.

Third is to provide for meeting most of the food-feed and seed needs on the farm through a production for use program.

Fourth step in enabling the family-sized farm to compete with larger units is to make modern machinery purebred sires and similar expensive operating facilities available through the community and co-operative services program providing for joint use by several farmers of services too costly for individual use.
