WASHABLE FABRICS ASSUME IMPORTANCE

Wash-Dress Fashions Prove a Revelation This Season.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS
Prevue showings of wash-dress fashions are proving a revelation this season. You will enjoy every minute and profit thereby in inspecting the lovely apparel made of materials that wash beautifully, though you find it almost unbelievable from their high-style look.

Some of the washable weaves that are tailored into smart daytime dresses and the silky crepes and lovely embroidered effects that you will be wearing to parties and clubs and other fashionable gatherings have every appearance of more expensive materials that must be dry-cleaned.

You will, of course, find many lovely prints, for prints are perennial, but this season it adds to their interest that so many of the new wash prints are international in feeling. You may choose a Persian print, or Hawaiian, Mexican, Spanish, mid-Europe peasant, a South sea island print, East Indian, or, if your taste runs to batik, they are reproduced in washables also in new fashionable exotic designs, not to neglect to mention prints that have America stamped in their exquisite color and design.

Stripes are everywhere and they run around just about as often as they go straight up and down. There are delightful variations from the conventional candy stripes. Pique is much used in narrow and wide wale, in cloaks, prints and stripes as well as plain. The new blister crepes have an air of sophistication and are used in some of the smartest daytime and playtime frocks.

In the finer fabrics linen comes in for a big share, both plain or in lovely hand-blocked prints.
