Coquille Eagles

At the pre-state convention meeting held at Roseburg last week, Coquille Aerie, F. O. E., No. 2196, made a commendable showing by having the largest delegation of any aerie in attendance. In addition to this, they had the largest number of candidates to put through the paces, with the exception of Roseburg.

The fact that Camas mountain was covered with snow and reports of stalled cars persisted in drifting in, the local aerie members hesitated not, but pointed their cars toward Roseburg. After all, it takes awfully tough weather to stop an Eagle in flight.

The meeting last Thursday evening was well attended and proved very enjoyable. Roy Wheeler, John Werth and Austin Kyle were all present in a body for the first time in several meetings. They are three old standbys who seldom have missed meetings regularly. When such members miss, their absence is especially noticeable.

Always active, the local aerie is laying plans for various campaigns in the future for the good of the community and of mankind.

Next Thursday evening is social night. A big program is in the offing and, of course as always, there will be plenty of eats. In fact, the aerie is fast becoming renowned for its social nights throughout southwestern Oregon. So come out and enjoy yourselves, Brothers!—Press Cor.

Howdy Folks: This week I am starting a column that will appear each week in the Sentinel on page 2. To make this column talk and interest you, I have secured the service of three well-known personalities. They are Will Sprout, Aunt Sally and Tom Tucker. This week we will talk about Will Sprout.

According to Will Sprout a modern father is one who is wired for cash.

Henry Ford advocates the return to some of the older customs for true happiness—he even suggests that we go back to the old straight razor—we doubt if that will ever come to pass. Ask the man who hones one.

Will is a sagacious Irishman and gets exceedingly haughty at times as all Irishers do.

One thing Will is prejudiced about is his determination to trade at Thrift's Grocery—he even gets haughty if anyone tries to get him to trade anywhere else... Why?

'Cause Will likes to save money and still get the best.

The most wonderful thing in life is sleep because it takes you out of it...
