'Correct Curtaining'

Home Economics Extension Unit meetings throughout Coos county this month are taking up the proper curtains and draperies for the well-dressed window, according to Julia Bennett, home demonstration agent.

Gone with the windows of the last century are the overdressed, fancy looped, and thickly fringed curtains, but even though styles in window curtaining may change, the principles remain the same.

The demonstration which includes many actual samples on "Correct Curtaining," given by the project leaders and "Planning, Designing and Making Draperies," presented by the home demonstration agent, bring out these fundamental principles concerning textures, scale, color and style. For instance, figured wall paper calls for plain curtains, and figured curtains for plain walls. Fabrics with small designs are suitable for small rooms with small windows and vice versa. The large formal patterns most often seen in damasks are for spacious formal rooms, while chintzes, cretonnes and prints create a friendly atmosphere.

The character of a room usually decides the type of curtain. For example, lustrous satin draperies are not suitable to rough plastered walls and stone fireplaces, beamed ceilings and casement windows. Rough textured fabrics such as homespun, crash, rep, osnaburg, linen, and monk's cloth are usually best drapery materials for rooms of this kind.

It there is time, the homemaker usually gains by buying a good quality of material and making her own window curtaining, says Miss Bennett.

"Our Children and Their Parents" is the subject which Mrs. Buena Maris, professor in family relationships at Oregon State College, has chosen for her address at the Coos County Family Living Conference on Friday, March 31. The conference will be held in the basement of the Pioneer Methodist Church in Coquille and will be open at 10:30 with a period of community singing, after which the Green Dell extension unit and the Bayview extension unit will each present a five-minute skit.

A pot-luck luncheon is planned at noon, and children will be cared for at the meeting.

Mrs. Maris will take up problems of parents and children which will be of interest to all parents, and the public is invited to attend part or all of this meeting, which will last until about 3:00 o'clock. The last part of the afternoon period will be devoted to discussion of questions which all those in attendance will be invited to drop into a question-box.
