Senior Play Next Friday

In presenting "The Eyes of Talco", a mystery drama by Agnes Emelle Peterson, the senior class of Coquille High school is bringing a new note in dramatics to school activities. According to Mrs. Ruth Beyers, class advisor and coach of the play, it is the highest type of play that has been presented here in many years, both in plot and characterization.

It will be the first class play given in the new high school gymnasium and is to be held on May 12.

The scene of the play is laid in southern Arizona, in the living room of the house on the Rancho de los Alamos, in late September. The plot is concerned with the contents of a certain "long box", the disappearance of Nancy Howe, his niece. The mystery is heightened by the arrival of a professor of archeology, a pugilist, and a fiery Mexican gentleman with his even more volatile sister. An eerie note is introduced by Nawa, the Indian, with his foreboding warning, "Let the eyes of Talco see and his hands shall do." Needless to say, the plot is satisfactorily solved and those concerned live happy ever after, but only after 3 acts filled with the most unexpected events.

Three Fined In J. P. Court
