

Crossing up all the political prognosticators the State Parole Board this week selected as the new parole director a man whose name had never been mentioned in connection with the numerous speculations for this position. That fact, however, does not necessarily detract from the qualifications of Fred Finsley, 33-year-old The Dalles attorney, whom the board has selected to administer the new parole organization which became effective this week.

A graduate of the University of Oregon where he studied sociology as well as law, Finsley was regarded by the board as the man best suited for the job out of the 42 who applied for the appointment. Selection of the remainder of the parole staff, including an assistant director, a psychiatrist and four field deputies, was to await a conference with the new director.

Oregon's new $2,500,000 capitol has no flag pole. This lack which has occasioned much comment by others since the completion of the building a year ago was not discovered by Governor Sprague until last week after he had issued a proclamation urging that the American flag be displayed on all public buildings during Flag week, which ended Wednesday. Not only is there no provision for displaying the flag from the new capitol but no funds are available for remedying this oversight unless the state emergency board can be convinced that the situation constitutes an emergency and entitled to immediate consideration. The governor told the board of control that his office was holding a fund of $294 contributed by various citizens following the capitol fire of 1935 which was available for beautification of the new building but this amount is entirely inadequate to provide a flag pole in keeping with the dignity of the state house.

National guard headquarters were transferred from Salem to Camp Clatsop Tuesday morning where they will be maintained for the duration of the annual maneuvers. Both Mayor General George A. White and Brigadier General Thos. E. Riles, as well as all members of the state staff will be at camp for the entire 15-day period.

Contrary to the popular impression the opinion handed down by the state supreme court last week in the case of Bruce Fox and others against the milk control board, did not involve the constitutionality of the milk control act but only the right of the control board to take money from one group of producers for the reimbursement of another group. The suit was brought by a group of "grade A" producers who objected to assessments levied by the control board under the pooling provisions of the milk control act. The constitutionality of the milk control act itself has never been before the supreme court which has studiously avoided any interpretation of the act. In upholding the hands of the control board in this suit the court divided four-to-three, with the minority members including Chief Justice Rand declaring the board's order in this instance to be "not a proper exercise of the police power" and a violation of the state constitution.

Responding to a demand on the part of peach growers for application of the Oregon marketing act to their product the state department of agriculture has scheduled a number of hearings at which interested growers will be asked to express their opinions on this subject. These hearings will be held at Roseburg, June 22; Eugene, June 27; Salem, June 28. As interpreted by the department of agriculture the peach marketing agreement, if arrived at, would apply to all of Oregon except that lying more than 50 miles east of The Dalles-California highway.

Both the Marion county grand jury and the state bar are expected to investigate alleged unethical practices on the part of certain attorneys who are said to charge glibly friends and relatives of penitentiary inmates exorbitant fees for their professional services in securing pardons and paroles. This practice, known to have existed for years, was exposed this week in a report by members of the state parole board to Governor Sprague.

The report specifically called attention to one case in which an attorney was said to have collected $520 of an agreed fee of $800 for his services in "springing" a prisoner serving a life term in the penitentiary for murder. As a matter of fact, the report points out, the attorney in question did not appear before the board at any time, did not discuss the case with any of its members and performed no legitimate service to justify his fee.

Members of the parole board have repeatedly issued warnings to relatives and friends of prisoners against employing attorneys in their efforts to secure the release of penitentiary inmates but apparently these warnings are wasted inasmuch as one of the persons contributing to the fee specifically referred to in the report was said to have had a copy of the warning in his possession at the time this "deal" was made.

Appearance of the September primary measure on the general election ballot in 1940 was assured this week when completed referendum petitions containing more than 26,000 signatures were filed with the state department. The measure, passed by the last legislature with the approval of Governor Sprague, would change the date for the biennial primary election from the third Friday in May to the first Wednesday after the first Monday in September. The referendum against the measure is sponsored by the State Grange, the State Federation of Labor and the Oregon Commonwealth Federation.

It's been a case of "on again, off again" with the medical chiefs of the State Industrial Accident commission this past month. First the commission announced the "resignation" of Dr. Joseph F. Wood, democratic hold-over from the Martin administration. A few days later it announced the appointment of Dr. Louis P. Gambee to succeed Wood. Dr. Gambee is also a democrat, but politics had nothing to do with either the resignation nor the appointment, according to the commission which was interested only in efficient administration, or so they explained in a statement shortly after Gambee was elevated to the post of chief medical examiner. Others, apparently, had different notions about the fitness of things political and otherwise. At least they made it so hot for the commission that last week Dr. Gambee also "resigned" and now Dr. Eugene W. Rockey, a rock-ribbed republican, is on the job, assisted by Dr. John P. Trommald, another republican.

Joe E. Dunne, former state senator from Multnomah county, and one time republican candidate for governor, is back in the public spotlight again. This time it is as the sponsor of a proposal to provide a pension of $80 a month to all needy persons 65 years of age or over, the pension to be financed through a two per cent tax on retail sales. Preliminary petitions for an initiative measure covering the proposed pension measure were filed with Secretary of State Snell this week by Dunne and William Arthur Harroun, both of Portland.

Marvin Skeels Will Leave Soon For Philippine Islands

It is announced from the recruiting office in Portland that Private Charles Marvin Skeels, Company C 29th Engineers, Portland, the son of Mrs. Birdie Skeels, of this city, and who enlisted for the 29th Engineers on September 29, 1937, has received, at his own request, a discharge from that organization for the purpose of re-enlisting for service in the Philippine Islands. He was forwarded to Fort McDowell, California, on June 5 to await the sailing of the next army transport for the Philippines, and was granted a 17-day delay enroute to enable him to visit his home prior to his departure from the United States.

Marvin came in last week for a visit at home. He will have to be in San Francisco next week and will sail for the Philippines on June 28.

ALL DOG OWNERS ATTENTION!

Tuesday, June 20, has been set as the deadline for payment of 1939 dog licenses in Coos county without penalty. After that date a penalty of $1 per dog becomes effective.

Also after that date all owners who have not paid their 1939 fees will be liable for prosecution. District Attorney Ben C. Flaxel has notified us he will prosecute all persons whose names are given him as owing dog licenses. The dog board has legal opinions that persons who owe the license fees and who do not pay may be brought into justice courts by the district attorney. Upon conviction, they will become liable for the fee, the penalty, and the court costs in addition. Regular license fees in effect until the penalty date are: males and spayed females, $1; females, $1.50.
