Dust Nuisance Abated on Dike

For a few days last week-end, after the final rough surface seal-coat had been applied on the dike highway southwest from Coquille, the dust was so thick from passing cars that a driver could hardly see a car length ahead of him. By Sunday, however, the rolling and the pressure of tires on the surfacing had so pounded the gravel and dust into the oil that traveling was much cleaner. The only trouble there now is that venturesome drivers are inclined to make a speedway of it.
