One wonders why the prayers and good wishes of the great majority of the people in this country which seem to be effective in the case of the Finns cannot have as much force on the other European battle front and on the sea.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11—Legislative influence of Washington and Oregon will be exerted to have restored many of the cuts made by President Roosevelt in the budget. As soon as the budget became public and the slashes were apparent, a movement was started to get more money for Bonneville and Grand Coulee. The latter was given an estimate of $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1941 (it was $23,000,000 for the current fiscal 1940), and Bonneville was cut to $8,000,000.

Representatives of the two states will appear before the ways and means committee of the house and present arguments for larger sums. Backers of Grand Coulee are anxious to expedite completion of that project; Bonneville boosters want four more generators installed. With present installation and generators being manufactured Bonneville will have six. The complete plan calls for ten units.

Reclamation will proceed under a slow bell. At the last minute there was stricken from the budget an estimate for a tunnel to drain the waters from Tule lake into lower Klamath lake. Until this project is undertaken, Klamath Falls will continue to be subjected to dust storms. Deschutes project is cut a few thousand dollars, but remains at practically $400,000. Work will continue on Wickiup and the 500 CCC enrollees will be available.

If congress does not increase the budget for Bonneville there will still be an abundance of funds to build transmission lines from Pasco to Midway and Midway to Ellensburg; from Pasco to Pendleton and Pendleton to La Grande, and Pasco to Colfax. Funds will be available to construct a transmission line from St. Johns to Astoria, down the Columbia river; another from St. Johns to Tillamook. Money will be ready for a survey for a line into Waldport, Lincoln county, and while work is progressing along the coast counties of Oregon, a survey will be made from Bonneville up the Deschutes to Bend, in central Oregon.

There will be curtailment of activities of the biological survey and the fisheries bureau, unless congress disregards the budget recommendations—both services very important to the Pacific northwest. Also hard hit are various functions of the department of agriculture in Oregon and Washington.

Army engineers are budgeted a very small amount by the president for river and harbor work and the corps will have to count pennies to barely get by. There is not enough money for them to undertake new projects, and they may not be able to repair the south jetty at the mouth of the Columbia. The program desired for Port Orford, Coos Bay, Yaquina, Bay Ocean, the harbors on the southwest Washington coast, are all cramped.

The president also made a deep cut in the estimate for flood control, which affects Walla Walla river, Columbia river, coastal streams and the Willamette Valley project.

On the other hand, the president has made increases. The National Resources Planning board of which his uncle, Frederic Delano, is chairman, is given $1,600,000 an increase of $312,000; and the office of government reports which makes movies and furnishes government officials

TWENTY YEARS AGO

(Taken from The Sentinel of January 16, 1920)

Mrs. L. P. Branstetter and Mrs. Edw. Ellingsen, a committee from the Woman's Club, made an appeal to the Commercial Club Wednesday evening for co-operation with the ladies in arousing sentiment for the purchase of Lamb grove by the city.

At the meeting of the school board last Saturday J. S. Lawrence, who has been the very efficient clerk of the board for the past five years, resigned that place. The reason is that the business of both the city and the district has so increased that he finds it impossible to give both the necessary attention.

Senator I. S. Smith has introduced this week at Salem a joint memorial resolution, which will no doubt be adopted, urging Congress to provide for the construction of the Roosevelt Military Highway.

Within a few weeks Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Liljeqvist will move from Marshfield to make their home in Portland.

With this issue the Sentinel completes its fourteenth volume—the sixth under the present management. We have been too long at the editorial desk to make any promise of what we are going to do to make the Sentinel a better paper in the future than it has been in the past. There is one thing, though, we want to repeat and that is, it largely depends on the readers themselves what kind of a newspaper they have. The items our readers voluntarily furnish us are, of course, the most satisfactory ones they find in the paper.

Tom Krewson has caught something like $300 worth of fur this winter—East Fork Notes.

with radio facilities), receives $1,055,000.

Robert Fechner, who was director of the CCC from its creation until his death a few days ago, has a record that was unique. Of all the scores of men connected with administrative positions during the new deal, Fechner was the only one who remained at the head of his agency throughout the years. And there has been less criticism of CCC than any other emergency bureau. The boys under Director Fechner performed services worth millions of dollars in all parts of the Pacific northwest, on the coast, in forests, mountains, ranges, parks and they have been of great assistance in lowering the cost of reclamation projects in both Oregon and Washington.

Rapid completion of Grand Coulee dam is forcing the bureau of fisheries to rush plans for handling salmon which cannot climb the dam as they do at Bonneville. The reclamation bureau is building hatcheries at Wenatchee on the Entiat, Methow and Okanogan rivers and these will be transferred to the bureau of fisheries for operation. The fisheries bureau trapped 80,000 mature Columbia river salmon at Rock Island dam last fall and transported them by truck to hatcheries, some of the salmon having a 150 mile ride in the tank.

The president slashed appropriations deeply to give more money for national defense, but so many communities are affected that there is a growing inquiry as to the necessity for more than two billion dollars being assigned to this purpose. It is believed congress will restore many of the cuts.
