The Coos Bay Times last evening published a retraction of the Coquille item, featured the evening before, which told of a purported engagement-announcement dinner at the R. A. Wernich home. "We'll take the truck to the grade schools and pick up all those which do not have the necessary plates," the officer said.

The fee to be paid is 25 cents, which licenses for the calendar year, and the plates are available at police headquarters in the city hall.

None of them resulted in casualties but north of the Bay a couple of women suffered broken legs, and several cars turned over on the hill this side of Delmar.

Telephone Pole Saves Buick

E. J. Long told this morning of a Buick car whose occupants had a narrow escape. He was the length of the Coaledo school house bridge behind them, coming from Marshfield, and the Buick was travelling slowly. When he came around the turn this side of the school house the Buick had skidded, turned clear around and was only prevented from dropping ten feet on to the railroad track by crashing into a telephone pole which broke glass and caved in the side of the car. He did not know whose car it was.
