After the packages were opened and admired, the guests repaired to the banquet hall where delicious refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, jello and coffee, were served. The long tables were most attractive, carrying out the shower motif, tiny pink and blue crepe paper streamers extended the length of the tables and appropriate place cards, candy cups and napkins enhanced the setting. Reception Held For New Rector And Wife

Guild Hall was well filled Tuesday evening, the occasion being the reception for the new vicar of St. James Episcopal church and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Chas. M. Guilbert who came from Ashland last week to take up his duties here. They are making their home in the former Alf Johnson house on South Elliott.

With Mrs. Edwin Lorenz, president of the Guild, presiding a fine musical program was presented. The first artist on the program was Mrs. Roy Barton, who was accompanied by Mrs. Maud Woodard at the piano.

Mrs. Fred Jensen, on her violin, and accompanied by Mrs. M. O. Hawkins, delighted the audience with her renditions, and Manning Nelson, accompanied by Miss Rose Naef, also delighted with vocal numbers. In response to continued encore he remarked that he might as well sing all the songs he had brought with him, and sang a third number.

Mrs. Jas. Watson and Mrs. Geo. W. Bryant presided at the coffee tables in the serving of refreshments, with sandwiches, cookies, nuts and candy in profusion making a very dainty finale for a pleasant evening.

Wednesday afternoon the Episcopal Guild ladies held their business meeting in the Parish House. Mrs. Chas. Stauff started reading the Lenten book, "Women and the Way." Present were: Mesdames L. H. Hazard, W. H. Mansell, C. V. Smith, Ida Owen, C. T. Selbig, Jas. Watson, E. W. Lorenz, Chas. Stauff, Frank Pook, A. O. Walker, Fred Hickok, A. N. Gould, H. N. Lorenz, M. Gratke, Annie Robinson, R. B. "Good Neighbors" A Good Play

"The best one-act, home talent play I ever saw" is the way one lady referred to the performance presented last Thursday evening on the Guild Hall stage, which was given under the auspices of the Evening Guild. And it is true that each character in the play seemed to be especially well fitted for the part he or she took. Mrs. E. W. Lorenz, the family servant, tried to keep the household, threatened with a scandal because the younger daughter had stayed out all night, on an even keel, and her terse remarks, as well as the voluble looks she scorched the family with, were especially humorous to those who know her.

Bill Booth was a wise-cracking young son, who brought laugh after laugh. He was irrepressible and was one of the highlights of the show.

The story of "Good Neighbors" dealt with the all-around-town scandal which followed the night-out Mildred Johnson, part taken by Mrs. Alton Clausen, with her boy friend, Montgomery Watson—George Tracy Leach.

Their escapade was harmless enough, but when the girl's mother, Mrs. B. L. Barkwell, confided the bread secret to the older married daughter, Caroline Radcliffe—Miss Muriel Dae—and the latter phoned two of the town's gossips, the resulting "talk" was dreadful to contemplate.

Wayne Smith as Father Johnson, had to be let in on the trouble and he presented a good characterization of an irate parent.

But all ended well when it came out that the young people were only running around the country buying a couple of dogs—the animals were there on the stage—and when the young people decided they cared enough for one another to be married.

Preceding the performance solos by Mrs. Maud Woodard and Rev. George R. Turney and a duet by the two, with Mrs. Louise Yarbrough at the piano, were pleasing preludes to the skit.

Masonic Grand Master Greeted

There were more than one hundred and twenty-five Masons present Monday evening for the official visit of Grand Master Leif S. Masters of eight of the nine lodges in the district were in attendance at the 6:30 dinner in the hotel with the grand master and at the splendid communication in Masonic hall, the master of the Gardiner lodge being the only absentee.

An interesting informal session, with Worshipful Master Julius Ruble acting as toastmaster, was held in the banquet room on the lower floor following the special meeting, at which refreshments were served by the stewards and committee and several of the visitors responded when called upon for talks.

Masters present included Julius Ruble, Coquille; Ellis Shull, Myrtle Point; John Fasnacht, Bandon; R. L. Dawdell, Port Orford; J. A. Shaven, Gold Beach; Harold Savage, Marshfield; C. A. Pittan, North Bend; Kenneth Kendall, Powers.
