A FRANKENSTEIN MONSTER!

By THE W. C. T. U.
IN 1833 the U. S. government turned loose a Frankenstein monster by changing its policy toward alcoholic liquor.

Clustered along the six and one-half year path which marks this monster's unrestricted rush lie the bodies of traffic victims, the undernourished children, the impoverished families, the diseased wrecks, the rotten framework of liquor-controlled politics.

John Q. Public doesn't know all the facts. Yet, only six and one-half years after repeal, many nationally-known individuals and groups have voiced their strong convictions that liquor is to blame for a major part of these post-repeal social miseries. These leaders have studied the facts. They have no axes to grind and their conclusions are unbiased, honest conclusions.

National Safety Council.
This unbiased research group announced in late 1939 that liquor figured in 25 per cent of all of the traffic deaths involving drivers or occupants in automobiles.

A high toll to pay for trying to mix alcohol and gasoline! They just won't mix.

The Methodist Church.
Bishop Ralph Spaulding Cushman said: "The liquor problem is supremely the job of the church... We are not going to have a revival of religion in America until the churches face social evils like the liquor traffic. Churches of God, wake up!"

Boys' Court
Judge J. M. Braude of the Chicago Boys Court says that adolescent delinquency resulting from liquor is present in 40 per cent of his cases and that the percentage is increasing.

The superintendent of the Los Angeles public schools classifies the three major school problems as alcohol, gambling, and irresponsibility.

Economist.
Roger W. Babson, widely known evaluator of financial and spiritual life, said recently: "After repeal I realized the terrific danger of the commercialized liquor traffic. Not drinkers alone suffer, but the country and youth. Accessibility increases use. America's keenest minds are using the newspapers, magazines, movies, and radio to entice youth to drink whisky."
