Del Talks On War Materials

Dr. De La Rhue, who spent several years in South and Central America, gave an informal talk at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday.

Referring to strategic war materials so much in the limelight now, the doctor said that Bolivia produced so much tin that the mines had to be shut down regularly to prevent flooding the markets and knocking the bottom out of prices. That a year or more supply could be landed in the United States in 60 days, if necessary, even if the eastern Oregon tin mines should prove inadequate.

As for rubber, he stated there was an area in South America nearly as large as the United States on which the trees grew in their native state, which would produce enough rubber to supply the world and that synthetic rubber could be produced from the coal in Coos county to supply all of the U. S.

He further stated that all the hue and cry about protecting the supply of these materials from the Orient was a lot of hooey to camouflage the New Deal's policy in the Pacific.

For the first time in many months there were no guests present at the club's luncheon.

Geo. Fuller Goes To Swan Island

George A. Fuller, who for the past five years has been the industrial arts instructor at the local high school, left last Friday for Portland, where he will embark upon new duties as a flight instructor on the civil pilots' training program at Swan Island.

This past summer, he completed the work necessary to secure his federal commercial license. Last week, he returned from Portland, where he took a two weeks' refresher course, given by the Portland Flying Service for flight instruction. During the refresher course, Mr. Fuller received the appointment for his new job.

Each instructor working on the program must train ten men every four months to the point where they can secure their private licenses. Each student must have at least two years of college work and must be physically qualified to meet Army and Navy requirements. Many of the students enrolling for training are now attending college.

Mrs. Fuller and young James Kenneth, accompanied Mr. Fuller.

Veterans Urged To Vote For Willkie

The following letter to newspapers was sent from Portland by Bob Dilard, formerly of Marshfield. In it he urges all World War Veterans to cast their ballots for Wendell Willkie:

I feel it is my patriotic duty to call the attention of all voters to the qualifications of Wendell L. Willkie for the presidency, from the viewpoint of an ex-service man.

Service Record of Wendell L. Willkie (copy of telegram in my possession) "Willkie enlisted as private day Americas entered war rose to Captain in 355th Field Artillery 94th Division served six months in France."

Willkie is a charter member of Thomas B. Welker Post No. 967, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and is a member and past commander of Summit Post No. 19, American Legion, at Akron, Ohio.

Willkie is also a recognized and outstanding business executive.

If Democracy is to be saved—if Americanism is to live as we fought for it—understand it—all ex-service men must get into this campaign and actively promote the cause of Wendell L. Willkie. The epetetic support of Veterans, who are willing to die that Freedom might live, will once again assure this country of tolerance and freedom from dictatorship.

Our families and friends need to be reminded that it was only the veterans who were made to suffer under Roosevelt's Economy Act. While billions of dollars were being spent on leaf-raking and boondoggling, pensions for our disabled comrades were reduced or ended. Under the impact of despair many of our fellow veterans took their lives. Others, who received their disabilities honorably in the service of our country, have had to rely on the charity of their families and friends.

Most of the veterans who read this will remember me as a former State Service officer who handled many hundreds of claims during this period. I know, personally, the havoc wrought among our comrades by the effect of the Economy Act.

This is our great opportunity—perhaps the only one we will have—to make one of our comrades the President of the United States. And you may be sure of one thing—Wendell Willkie, as president, will never permit his son to be commissioned as an army captain and procurement officer, over the heads of experienced men.

I say, "Veterans Vote for Wendell Willkie!"

Styled For Victory

That's the ingenious, graphic headline that Cliff Gulseth of Southwestern Motors has written to epitomize the exterior beauty of the 1941 Chevrolet.

"In 1940, Chevrolet sold more than a million units—and style was one of its major attributes," declared Mr. Gulseth. "To obtain the same degree of commanding leadership in sales as it did last year, Chevrolet had to develop a super-style leader—one truly styled for victory—again!"

Briefly, he outlined some of the style reasons in the 1941 Chevrolet: (1) low-slung sleekness and grace; (2) longer, wider and lower body and judicious use of horizontal trim to accentuate the modern appearance; (3) a redesigned grille, featuring heavier and more horizontal bars; (4) guards that harmonize with the new grille, heightened by smart sealed-beam headlamps, whose housings are Integral with the front fenders. "These are but a few of the style angles," continued Mr. Gulseth. "In addition, there is the absence of running boards on the new Chevrolet. This is not new. There has been a tendency in this direction ever since streamlining began to receive emphasis; but in most of the cars which have abandoned running boards, one has to step directly from the ground into the car. Chevrolet's new design meets the requirements of modern styling, not only without the slightest sacrifice of safety or of convenience, but with several actual advantages. First, since the step is concealed and sheltered by the door, a dry, clean, safe footing is assured at all times. Second, the clean appearance of the car is easier to maintain, since there are no horizontal surfaces on which dirt, water, snow and ice can accumulate. And, finally, the strong, broad box sills on which the steps are mounted contribute directly to the body's safety and strength."
