Geo. Gratke Receiving Naval Aviation Training In East

Geo. C. Gratke formerly in the bank here, writes that he was one of 350 members of the Naval Aviation Corps recently transferred by special train from Bremerton, Wash., to Chicago, where they are getting a few weeks of schooling at a naval armory. Where he will be transferred from there he does not know.

In a letter received yesterday, he says:

The Sentinel is received regularly and, I assure you, that it is indeed a real treat to get it, thereby keeping me abreast with the activities in Coquille. It will be four weeks tomorrow that I've been in Chicago, having been transferred here from Bremerton. There are quite a group of us going to school at the Naval Army. Since we are located on the water's edge of Lake Michigan, we're given an excellent opportunity to appreciate the enjoyable (?) and cool breezes of the Windy City. Since our study schedule is quite heavy, our liberty is definitely curtailed; however, in spite of this, we are availing ourselves of every opportunity to see the "spots" of the city.

We will be here for a short stay yet, after which all of us will be transferred to one of nine schools scattered throughout the country. I've been advised today that I'll be able to attend the school of my choosing, which happens to be Queens College at Grove City, Penn.

Calling cards, 5c for $1.00.
