Why Number 88 stopped at Pequop

We'll bet you never heard of Pequop, Nevada. But we know Mrs. Charles Moore of San Francisco has.

Mrs. Moore is the mother of Private Eugene Moore of the U. S. Marines—the man who was beaten, stabbed and mauled by a small army of Japs in the Solomons—and lived.

Eastbound on Southern Pacific's Train Number 88, Mrs. Moore had given up hope of seeing her son again, when a telegram from her husband was delivered to her on the train at Wells, Nevada. It said:

"GENE IS HOME. COME BACK."

Mrs. Moore ran frantically through the train, found the conductor and cried, "I've got to get back—my son is home safe!"

Now conductors are used to emergencies, and they try to be as helpful as they can. But when Conductor Fred C. Snooks found out that the son was indestructible Moore of the U. S. Marines he really went into action.

Quickly comparing his train orders, Snooks saw he would meet the first westbound train at Icarus, Nevada, but he knew he wouldn't be able to get his flagman far enough ahead to stop the other train in time. So he decided to take the siding at Pequop, a small station west of Icarus, and make the transfer there. It would delay two trains, but what of it? The main thing was to get Mrs. Moore back to her son.

Approaching Pequop, Snooks signalled his engineer to stop and take the siding. His head brakeman ran forward a quarter of a mile and flagged down the westbound train. Conductor Snooks transferred Mrs. Moore to the care of Conductor Linton and sent her speeding westward, back to her son.

This incident has nothing to do with Southern Pacific's part in the war effort. It simply shows that a railroad is more than tracks and rails—it is people. And no matter how busy or hard-pressed railroad people are, they are still human beings, and their hearts are in the right place.

Return Of Glass Bottles Asked

An appeal is being made by milk distributors and beverage bottlers of all kinds, throughout eight western states, to the public that they return all bottle containers promptly, and a special drive to accomplish this has been set for the week of April 19-24. The press and radio are asked to help in this campaign. In a three-day drive in California 832,000 milk bottles were returned.

The shortage is caused by three factors: Neglect on the part of the public to bring back deposit bottles promptly.

Large off-shore shipments of beer and carbonated beverages to our Pacific outposts. Bottle returns on shipments to the Armed Forces are very small. This situation has brought about a substantial reduction of the normal "float" of beer and beverage bottles.

Tremendous increased demands on glass manufacturing facilities, principally by food industries.

Calling cards, 50 for $1.00.
