Federal Funds A Vital Need For Forest Protection

Forest protective organizations and timberland owners in the Pacific Northwest face the prospect of the most dangerous and hazardous forest fire in history without benefit of federal emergency funds such as were used to such good advantage last year. A $6,500,000 emergency fund has been cut from the special deficiency appropriation budget by the house of representatives. This would have been divided among the states for use against enemy sabotage and for preventive purposes.

Leaders in both Oregon and Washington forest industries circles, state officials and fire protective association wardens are bringing terrific pressure on western congressmen to get the emergency forest fire fighting funds reinstated and are asking the general public's support.

"Our need is greater than ever and the possibility of sabotage of our forests puts the Pacific Coast in the combat zone of this war," said Orville Miller, president of the West Coast Lumbermen's association. "The extra help must come from congress to increase the effectiveness of our forest fire fighting organizations by adding extra men to meet enemy attacks against our forests."

In citing the need for the emergency funds Oregon State Forester Nelson S. Rogers said, "This money is designed to care for emergency expense occasioned by war hazards to our forests and would supplement the already extremely large contribution of industry, timber owners and the state. It is identical in amount with the emergency funds received last year and which we used so effectively. Oregon's share of this fund would be $488,820."

"Private operators this year have contributed $486,255 for fire protection through state controlled associations, the state has put up another $377,997, and private timber land owners in addition will spend this year an additional $1,117,600, State Forester Rogers pointed out. "State and private operators have done all they can. This added money we want is for preventive measures to meet the ever-present dangers and hazards caused by the war. This is a national responsibility and must be borne by the federal government."

NOTICE OF HEARING OF FINAL ACCOUNT
