by LANS LENEVE

There's no question as to the fact that the steel-head is the gamest fish in Oregon waters. What a thrill it is to fish the Rogue or North Umpqua when these fish are striking a fly!

And with light tackle, either using bait, spinner or fly, the man who hooks a steel-head in swift water is in for a lot of fun.

Most every angler loves to snare the big fish of any species—the giant Chinook, the silverside, the jack salmon, the big cut-throat or the gamey rainbow and ninety-nine out of every hundred anglers will angle for the larger fish, and when one is hooked and landed, few are adverse to bragging about it for many seasons to come.

Large rivers, with swift riffles that melt into the dark recess of deep pools and long stretches of deep water usually yield the big fellows. It is nice to wade and meander along the banks of such large streams. It is thrilling to chug along with a "kicker," on the smooth surface of a deep river trolling for salmon or striped bass. And many sportsmen stick strictly to angling for large fish and hunt only the larger rivers, bays and streams in their pursuit of them. But to the writer the smaller streams hold the most fascination. Although we must confess that we enjoy taking salmon, bass and the larger trout and steel-head, nevertheless we would not trade a day of big fish angling for a day spent along one of the smaller streams. Perhaps it may be something inherited from our boyhood days, when with a bent pin for a hook, a can of angleworms and a cut willow limb serving as a rod, we trod the banks of the small streams.

There is something about the soft song of a small stream that no voice of a mighty river may equal. The brook's song is so peaceful, so friendly—sort of soothes a fellow's soul, puts him in a friendly mood with all nature. It stirs pleasant memories of days gone by. And fighting one's way through thick brush to reach a quiet, dark hole in a small stream holds a certain allure—a different sort than that encountered while fishing the large rivers.

The food administration is urging that people eat the lowly carp, stating that they are fine food. They may be to a lot of people who have never eaten a brook trout, but they never appealed to the writer.

Over in Utah, my wife and I caught 53 pounds of carp on one fishing trip. Our neighbors sure went for them in a big way. We gave them a try, the carp, and one trial was enough. There was no limit on them in that state and we used to bring in sacksful of them, spread them out on our lawn and called the neighbors and it didn't take the carp long to disappear.

The taking of carp, fresh water ones (naturally), was sponsored by game officials of the Rockies, owing to the fact that they depleted the trout supply in the lakes and streams. Prizes were offered for the largest ones taken, for the largest catch of a season, etc. A 12 or 14 pound carp taken on a fly rod puts up a nice battle for a short while.

Commission To Act On Hunting Regulations, Saturday, June 12

The annual hearing of the Oregon State Game Commission in regard to hunting regulations will be held at ten o'clock, Saturday, June 12, at its offices in the Oregon Building, Portland.

Seasons, bag limits and other regulations governing the taking of game animals, game birds and fur-bearing animals will be considered at that time by the Commission.

Coquille Valley Young Men In The Marine Corps

Promotion of Private First Class Lawrence O. Gulseth, 24, U. S. M. C., of Coquille, to that rank, from his previous rank of private in the Marine Corps, has been announced at his duty station with an Aviation Training Squadron, Marine Corps Air Base, San Diego, Calif. Private First Class Gulseth, now wearing the single chevron of his rank, enlisted in the Marine Corps October 21, 1942. He is the husband of Mrs. Mary Lou Gulseth, of this city.

Private First Class George Wasley Laird, 26, of Bullards Route, Coquille, has been transferred from Marine Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., to Quantico, Va., to complete officer training.

Upon graduation from the Quantico Officers' Candidate School, Laird will be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant.

At Camp Lejeune, the Leatherneck underwent advanced artillery training for a month. His "boot camp" training was received at Parris Island, S. C.

The marine's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Laird, and his wife, Mrs. Lurene Laird, reside on Bullards Route.

When the Coquille man enlisted he was a defense worker, welding for the Willamette Iron and Steel Corporation. He attended Oregon State College for two years, majoring in mechanical engineering.

Another former Coquille young man, Freddy D. Medlock, Jr., has been reported as missing in action by the War Department. According to word recently received from his mother in Tacoma, Wash., he has not been heard of since the Jap conquest of the Philippines a year ago last month.

Army In Urgent Need Of Graduate Nurses

There is such a desperate need for graduate nurses in the Army that Governor Snell is appealing to all qualified women to apply at once for commissions and urges young women who can take nurse training to make themselves available for that duty.

The governor says that as yet the nurses and the people in general apparently do not realize that the shortage of graduate nurses is critical, but as this personnel finally becomes aware of vital need of the Army, he is convinced that there will be a quick response.
