Observed On A Quiet Labor Day

East Second street in Coquille was a busy neighborhood on Labor Day afternoon. Noticed Stan Fitzgerald putting the finishing touches on the excellent paint job he has been doing on his residence.

Next door R. W. Kuenzli was happily hammering away on a new chicken house and being helped by his son, Bobby. The egg shortage won't bother that family for long.

Mrs. Clarence Barton was busily digging her potato crop from the parking in front of her home near Heath and Second and in the cool of the evening, Mrs. Phil Alborn was picking vegetables.

Ray Jeub was endlessly moving the water sprinkler around, pausing to chat with the frequent passers-by.

All this on a quiet September 6 afternoon.
