Winegar, received word recently from the War Department that their son, Kenneth, who enlisted in the Army Air Corps in September prior to Pearl Harbor, was missing, following a bomber flight over Germany. Coquille Boys In Service Outstanding

Marc Shelley, looking very trim in his Navy uniform and in splendid health, has been at home since last Saturday, visiting Mrs. Shelley and home folks. He left this morning for San Francisco, where his vessel, a destroyer, has been undergoing repairs for a couple of weeks.

Marc is a carpenter's mate second class and, during the year he has been in the Navy, has seen considerable action in the Pacific. His vessel's last trip was a three months' voyage from this coast.

He reports that George McDonald, formerly with the bank here and who was also here this week, is on the same destroyer that he is.

Marc says he has encountered several Coquille boys on his trips around the Pacific and says that without exception they are outstanding and fulfilling their duties in protecting the United States and fighting the sneak Japs in a most creditable manner. He mentioned particularly Alvin Shaver, whom he encountered before the latter was sent up to Alaska where he met death, some months ago in a plane crash.
