Adventist Church Report On Its Missions In Africa

How Christian missions in Africa during the past half century have changed hundreds of devil-worshipping communities into centers of cleanliness, peace, and religion, was featured March 25 in a special Sabbath-school program given in the Coquille Seventh-day Adventist church.

Instead of being tortured by the witch doctor, the people, afflicted with all kinds of tropical diseases, now receive scientific medical treatment from missionary doctors and nurses. Churches are filled with worshippers and thousands gather at their annual religious district meetings. Children and youth are given a Christian education, taught useful trades, and trained as practical missionaries to teach other tribes a better way of life.

In Africa last year, according to the report, the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of their first mission station will be widely celebrated. This is the Solusi mission in Bulawayo, Rhodesia, and its founder, W. H. Anderson, is at present active in Africa assisting in the direction of mission stations that now stretch from the Southern tip of Africa to Uganda, a distance of 4,000 miles. Nine hospitals, twenty-six dispensaries, and four leper colonies, are in operation, and their work is reaching peoples and tribes speaking seventy different languages. Adventist church membership and those in classes awaiting baptism total about 90,000. At the meeting, calls were read from Chiefs of tribes in areas unentered by this type of Christian work, asking for schools and medical help for their people. The offering given will help to answer these, in harmony with the plan for the day in all of the Sabbath schools the world around.

Now in stock at Norton's are many of the "scarce" items. Three-ring notebooks in genuine leather, fabric or canvas; compasses, gem clips and some very good small metal boxes.

For the present—due to difficulty in getting material—will make portraits and group pictures on appointment ONLY.

Copies of documents, photostats, also Kodak finishing same as usual.

Thanking you

"Double-duty Doctor"

With thousands of doctors in our armed forces, every M. D. on the home-front is doing double duty. Except in serious cases, don't ask your doctor to make "house calls." In the time he spends going to your home, he could treat several patients in his office. So, go to him, rather than asking him to come to you, whenever possible.
