Washington, D. C., May 25 - Conflicting policies pursued by war food administration and office of price administration have brought about an alarming situation in the feed supply, according to reports reaching the national capital. Stocks of corn and wheat, the staples for livestock feed, are being decimated so rapidly that shortages are appearing in all parts of the country and particularly in the northwest where a deficit has existed even in normal years. The available supply of feed wheat will be practically exhausted before another harvest and the situation with respect to corn is almost as serious. As of April 1 the available supply of livestock feed was approximately one billion bushels less than on the same date one year ago.

Before the war and in the period of the so-called ever-normal granary, the United States had a carry-over supply of feed grains amounting to about one year's requirements. Because of the greatly increased livestock population in the past three years feed has been disappearing at the rate of one and one-third crops a year, so that its ultimate exhaustion became a mathematical certainty within a given period. Imposition of price ceilings by OPA and urgings by WFA for greater livestock production have operated to aggravate this condition to such an extent as to make a feed shortage inevitable.

Lack of cargo vessels available for that purpose curtails possible augmentation of feed supplies by importation of corn from Argentina and while there is a small reservoir of surplus wheat in Canada, there is a disposition in government circles to conserve this supply against the time when it may be needed for human consumption. If unfavorable conditions develop in United States wheat fields there will be urgent need for this grain even at the sacrifice of the livestock industry. The situation has now become so serious that one high government official is quoted as saying that it is possible the newspapers will be carrying true stories of entire poultry flocks being killed off for lack of feed.

Recent removal of rationing points from certain cuts of meat was for the purpose of encouraging sales of meat, thereby reducing the livestock population and relieving the feed situation, but less meat is consumed during the summer months and the effect has not been up to the expectations of OPA. Nor is the situation improved by the OPA announcement that full rationing of meat may be resumed at an early date.

Members of the house were undecided whether to become hilarious or indignant over complaints received from grocers and other retail dealers because of a suggestion from office of price administration that they wash ration tokens before handing them back to customers in making change for ration stamps. The suggestion reads, "Retailers can please customers by handing out clean, fresh-looking tokens in change for stamps." As hundreds of millions of these tokens are in circulation and the daily "take" by a retailer may run into the thousands it is somewhat discouraging to contemplate the waste of manpower which would be involved in washing each individual token in order that it might be kept "clean and fresh-looking."

Back of the filing of an anti-trust suit against American match companies is a much more serious matter than the present shortage of matches in the United States. Because of the cartel in which American, British and Swedish match companies are participants, it is alleged in the anti-trust suit, "this country had practically no production of chlorate of potash at the outbreak of the war" for the making of ammunition, flares and other signals. This situation, it is asserted, was due to the entrance of the ubiquitous I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany into the picture, and dates from 1922 when that German chemical trust made the Diamond Match company its exclusive agent in the United States on condition that the American company cease manufacturing this chemical. There are other alleged violations of the anti-trust law but they concern matters of price and distribution and have no relation to the war effort.

The fact that sales of surplus consumer goods are now running around $12,000,000 a month has given the erroneous impression that high government officials are counting on an early end of the war. As a matter of fact these sales have no connection whatever with prolongation of the military effort. Disposal of surpluses accumulated for military purposes will be through other agencies and it will not occur until the fighting has ceased or the war has reached a stage where the inevitable end is in sight.
