Agricultural interests are pointing with alarm to the wool situation obtaining in the United States at present.

It is shown that practically all suits of clothes are now made from foreign wool shipped in from Argentina and Australia. Huge quantities of domestic wool have been placed in storage because it could not compete successfully with foreign wool in the clothing market.

Plainly, this situation cannot continue status quo indefinitely. The wool in storage must be disposed of somewhere and somehow, if the sheep raising industry in the United States is to be preserved. The policy of the Administration is to avoid the issue by storing domestic wool under a scheme that virtually amounts to a subsidy by the taxpayers and merely postpones the inevitable day when the issue must be met squarely.

The Administration customarily "rolls with the punch" and avoids definite commitments wherever possible. But in this matter it would seem as if delay in establishing protective policies for the wool industry might be very serious if the war should end this year as is possible. It is difficult to see how American standards of living can be successfully maintained without some sort of protection to our industries in the way of tariff or other equalizing devices which will force foreign products to compete with American industry for our domestic market.

With this in view it would appear that we are doing the opposite from what common sense would dictate as proper because the foreign wool, being cheaper, should have been stored and the more expensive domestic wool used in the current war manufacture, thus reducing the carrying charge of the wool inventory and establishing channels of trade for the domestic product. The importing of foreign wool probably should not be cut off completely but it should be in amounts and under conditions that will not interfere with the domestic wool market. We must expect to purchase goods from other countries if they are to repay their indebtedness to us. But careful, business-like handling can accomplish this purpose without destruction of any American industry.

A friend of mine showed me a cartoon in the Seattle Times depicting the predicament the American public is in regard to control of our expenditures of tax money.

The cartoon was in two parts; the upper showing a typical John Q. Public family driving a fine team of horses representing the government. The public held the reins firmly in hand. The second part showed the same team and carriage but this time the latter was filled with a mass of grinning office-holders each of whom had hold of the reins with no one individual having complete control. Poor old John Public was hanging desperately to the rear gate of the wagon with the dust swirling about him. Can any better illustration be made of the present situation where the people have virtually lost control of the Government expenditures through yielding of local control to centralized government in Washington? The Congress has been repeatedly by-passed through executive directives in the expenditures of tax money and the chickens, loosed by the blank checks issued, in the last Congress, are coming home to roost.

The chief difference between the two major parties lies not in foreign policy, which is practically the same in both platforms, but in domestic policies. The Democratic Party, as lead by Mr. Roosevelt personally, advocates a centralized government by bureaus in Washington, increasing federal control and decreasing state control over the taxpayers' money. The Republican Party advocates decentralization of government with decreasing of federal control and increasing of state and local control over tax expenditures. The Roosevelt democratic theory is that more government in business is essential to prosperity. The Republi-

TWENTY YEARS AGO

(Taken from The Sentinel of Friday, June 27, 1924)

An event which comes to a man and woman but once in a lifetime, and to very few, was celebrated at the H. W. Dunham home on Hall street here last Sunday. The occasion was the golden anniversary of their marriage, which occurred June 24, 1874.

The school board has taken steps toward securing an architect to prepare plans for the high school remodeling and for the new gymnasium.

About 40 of the business men of Bandon and 20 ranchers of the Arago section spent the day Wednesday on the Flattrap-Lampa market road, putting it in shape for travel this summer.

J. E. Perrott this week sold The Variety Shop to Fred A. Wimer, who has just completed a four-year course at O. A. C.

One of the manufacturing plants, which we were eagerly hoping to see established here some years ago was a milk condensary. Now as a further illustration of the old adage that "It never rains but it pours," we learn that the selection of Coquille as the location for a big paper plant will insure the establishment of a milk condensary here.

U. S. battleships Nevada and New Mexico were reported outside Coos Bay by the Englewood radio station Monday. The boats are enroute to Seattle to take part in the Fourth of July celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Lorenz and daughter, Miss Camilla, intend leaving Sunday in their car for a two weeks' visit in California. They will stop at Redding and in Trinity county they will spend the Fourth. It was from there 37 years ago on Tuesday of this week that Mr. Lorenz came to Coos county.

William Norris, who has been suffering from hardening of the arteries and who was gradually becoming paralyzed, passed away at the home of his nephew, Jas. W. Laird, last Friday evening.

Weekly Letter

By Congressman Ellsworth

Washington, D. C., June 24, 1944—The activities of Congress ceased today for a period of several weeks so that Members who wish to do so may attend both the Republican and Democratic National conventions. Both conventions are being held in Chicago this year. The Republican meeting will begin Monday. I am leaving for home today, but will stop off in Chicago and watch the operations of the Republican National Convention. Although I shall be away from Washington several weeks, my office here will be open, and any matters requiring attention here can be handled by my very competent office staff. Just address me in the usual way—House Office Building Washington, D. C.

When I am in Oregon during the summer, I expect to be travelling around the district the greater part of the time, but office space has very kindly been provided for me in the post office building in Roseburg, which will be my personal headquarters, and through which I can be reached at nearly any time.

This is the last weekly newsletter I shall write for some little time. I wish it were possible, as a substitute for this weekly communication, to see and talk with everyone in my congressional district during the summer. I realize that is not possible, but I do want to see everyone who has some problem with which I might help, or who has anything at all to talk over with me.

can theory is that government expenses and interference with business should be kept at a minimum and that there should be a great reduction in tax expenditures in post-war to the end that all possible funds should be left available to industry for expansion and increasing employment.

Despite the smoke screen of the usual pre-election propaganda, the real issue is substantially as stated above and the voters should consider carefully in selecting which of the two systems will best nurture private enterprise in America.

Don't Fail—Tune in KOOS on your radio Sunday evenings at 7:15. 1944

Two Waves To Be Here For The Fourth

Ensign Barbara Sadler and Petty Officer Joan Obidias of the WAVES will be featured at the WAVES recruiting booth at the Coquille Fourth of July celebration in Coquille 1, 2, and 4 to assist young women in this area in learning about their opportunities in the WAVES, stated Chief Paul H. Connet, recruiter-in-charge of the Marshfield U. S. Navy Recruiting Substation, which handles WAVES applications in this area, when he was here Monday.

The two WAVES recruiters from the WAVES enlistment headquarters for Oregon, at 735 E. W. Alder street, Portland, are making a tour of Coos and Lincoln counties and the coast areas of Lane and Douglas counties to increase enlistments in this women's service of the U. S. Navy.

Appointments for interviews for young women who are interested in joining the WAVES can be arranged for by telephoning, writing, or calling at the Marshfield U. S. Navy Recruiting Substation in the Marshfield U. S. Post Office.

With the tempo of the war in the Pacific increasing, the need for WAVES in the U. S. Navy is urgent, Edis Chief Connet. WAVES are needed to replace trained men on shore stations who are required to man the ships in offensive operations against the Japs in the Pacific. With warships being commissioned almost daily, the supply of trained men to handle them becomes smaller each week unless these men are relieved of their shore station duties by WAVES.

Opening of new schools for WAVES, recent relaxation of physical requirements, assignments of WAVES in the Navy's famed hospital corps, and the increase in the number of jobs WAVES now handle in the U. S. navy have created new opportunities for young women. After indoctrination at Hunter college, New York, they receive advanced specialized training at the nation's leading colleges.

General requirements for WAVES have been relaxed so that almost any young woman in good health can qualify. Applicants must be between 20 and 36 years of age, have no children under 18 years of age and be U. S. citizens. A recent ruling provides that wives of navy enlisted men may not enlist in the WAVES.

A SECRET WEAPON
the Navy shares with you

To lubricate Uncle Sam's submarine Diesel engines so they run clean and smooth on long cruises, the Navy uses RPM DELO.

The Navy is sharing this "secret weapon" with the home front... and RPM DELO is doing a great job in thousands of tractor, truck, marine and stationary Diesel engines. It's specially compounded to prevent sludging and gummed-up pistons—it actually cleans and frees rings stuck through use of other oils. Millions of test miles in laboratories and actual service proved that it just about DOUBLES THE TIME BETWEEN OVERHAULS. The Navy can't afford to take chances with its fighting Diesels—and neither can you. Get RPM DELO and you get the all-around lubricant for all Diesels.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I can't think of anything else you'll need for your Victory garden, Judge... you've got pretty nearly everything."
"I think so, too, John. Ever get your asparagus patch going?"
"I gave that up last year, Judge. Tried it six years in a row with no luck. Just haven't got the right soil, I guess?"
"Well, I think you're wise, John... no use keeping on trying things you know won't work. Just like prohibition. State-wide prohibition has been tried in this country seventy-two times in the last ninety years. It has been adopted forty-seven times in the past thirty-three years and discarded everywhere except in three states. Same thing was tried in eight provinces in Canada and in Norway, Sweden, Finland and Russia but it was an admitted failure and universally abandoned."
"The reason is prohibition does not prohibit. All you get is bootleg liquor instead of legal liquor, plus no end of crime and corruption."
