Nazis' Civilian Slaughter House

(From Eugene Register-Guard) Editor's Note: The only war correspondents permitted to accompany the Russian armies except for occasional conducted tours of the front are Russian. One of these Russian correspondents has written the following special dispatch on the German crematorium at Lublin.

By Roman Karmen Soviet War Correspondent Lublin, Poland, Aug. 11—(Delayed) In the course of all my travels into liberated territory I have never seen a more abominable sight than Maidan, near Lublin, Hitler's notorious vernichtungslager—extremation camp—where more than half a million European men, women and children were massacred.

Baby Yar, the Kiev graveyard of some 100,000 civilians, was a country cemetery compared with Maidan. Even now, when SS guards no longer call to each other from the watch towers and there are no more barking dogs, I cannot believe my own eyes walking through Maidan, officially known as Dachau concentration camp No. 2. This was not a concentration camp; it was a gigantic murder plant.

Save for 1000 living corpses the Red army found when it entered, no inmate escaped from here alive. Yet full trains daily brought thousands here from all parts of Europe to be coldly, brutally massacred.

In the center of the camp stands a huge stone building with a factory chimney—the world's biggest crematorium. The Germans attempted to burn the crematorium, but most of it still stands—a bronze monument to the third reich.

Groups of 100 persons would be brought here to be burned almost alive. They already had been stripped and then chlorinated in special gas chambers adjoining. The gas chambers contained some 250 persons at one time. They were closely packed in a standing position so that after they suffocated from the chlorine they still remained standing.

Executioners then would enter, remove the suffocated victims, some of whom still stirred feebly, and placed the bodies in special carts. The carts were dumped into a roaring furnace heated to 1900 degrees centigrade.

The whole thing was organized with diabolical efficiency. The victims' charred bones and ashes were moved into an adjoining department where an incredible process went on. These human bones were mechanically pulverized, placed inside large tin cans and shipped back to Germany for fertilizing the German fields.

It is difficult to believe it myself, but my eyes cannot deceive me. I see the human bones, lime-barrels, chlorine pipes and furnace machinery. I see the enormous dumps of shoes, sandals and slippers in men's, women's and children's sizes, bearing the trademarks of a dozen European countries. The walls of one room collapsed under the weight of these shoes which the Germans were salvaging for their own people.

The cremation furnace was running day and night and its chimneys never ceased smoking. The capacity of its five compartments was 1400 daily. But that was too small for the Germans, who had begun to build an annex when the Red army arrived, breaking ground and piling up bricks for its construction.

The Russian army arrived in time to save the last set of victims earmarked for slaughter. I talked with many of these living corpses. That means I did most of the talking, because few of them could either speak or move.

If it is insurance, see me—F. R. Bull. s

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON IN AND FOR COOS COUNTY MARJORIE E. MCGARVIN, PLAINTIFF, VS. DONALD P. MCGARVIN, DEFENDANT
