Morse, Republican Spokesman

(Oregon Voter) As far back as 1934 Wayne Morse helped prepare a declaration of republican party policy in behalf of honest private enterprise and against the New Deal's attempts to crush the kind of private enterprise that had made America great. Morse had been a republican from boyhood, and he was consistent with his republicanism in his voting against Roosevelt in 1932, in 1936 and in 1940. As a republican party speaker in the 1936 and 1940 campaigns he expressed the constructive policies for which his party stood and voiced scathing indictments of the New Deal. "We must have a sound domestic program which Congress can support. Hence, it is vital that we change presidential horses in the middle of the stream so that we can get the governmental cargo across to the shores of national safety." "As a public member of the War Labor Board, I participated for two years in the so-called 'battle of Washington,' and as my record shows, I fought the New Deal whenever it attempted to substitute political expediency and government by men for judicial processes and government by law." "As a Republican Party we must see to it that the American public is relieved from the sovietizing dictates of the regulation-writers back in Washington." "The spendthrift palace guard seem determined to lead us into a system of complete federalization of our economy." We have Silver Identification Bracelets for Men, a good variety. We also repair Alarm Clocks. Schroeder Jewelry. tfs
