

Surgical Dressings Still Vitrally Needed

Surgical dressings are in great demand now as any thinking person reading the news from day to day can not help realizing. The "faithful few" are carrying on as best they can, with extra hours given to help meet the large quota assigned to Coos county and which must be ready for shipment by December. But there is a need for many more workers who will make it their business to give a few hours regularly each week to this worthy cause.

Classes meet Tuesday mornings, from nine to twelve; Wednesday, one group beginning at eight, working until noon; another group beginning at ten and working until four-thirty; while still others come at one o'clock and finish at four-thirty.

Mrs. M. O. Hawkins and Mrs. Bert Folsom will pick up those wishing to come at eight o'clock. Mrs. Florence Berg and Mrs. Harriet Greenough bring the ten o'clock group and you may contact Mrs. Ray Teub for the one o'clock afternoon class, says Mrs. J. R. Bunch, who adds: "We will gladly organize a night class for those who may wish to help at this time providing a sufficient number volunteer to make it practical."

There Are Many More Repentants Like Him

Riverton, Oreg., Sept. 28, '44
Editor Sentinel: I listened to the speech of the Commander-in-Chief, F. D. R. It made my heart ache to hear his poor dog had such a narrow escape from being dumped, just for the sake of a few votes. On the other hand Thomas E. Dewey's poor dog had to stay home; he could not afford the trip at that time.

But as the 7th of November approaches and the New Deal rolls away, Thomas' dog will take the late little dog Falla's place in the White House. Thomas has the indispensable man sitting in a chair now; soon he will be on his stomach.

If you can find any part of this, or all of it, is worth printing, go ahead. I supported F. D. R. the first time and am ashamed of it. I am 100 per cent for Dewey.

I. L. Baumgartner.

Splendid Talk By Wayne Morse

bureaus, as well as the president, to make the laws of the country.

Speaking of bureaucrats who have shown their policy very clearly, Mr. Morse said that Ickes, Hopkins, Frankfurter and others believe in government participation in business and industry. He, Morse, believes business should be in private control.

In his many talks to labor officials and labor conventions he has repeatedly said that if labor has always to turn to the government for settlement of its troubles, then the time is soon coming when labor will not be free but will have its entire policy directed by the executive. "We cannot have political democracy unless we also have economic democracy," and the speaker went further to declare that he believes in private enterprise but not in economic license under which capitalism in years past paid less than a living wage and operated under conditions unsafe to life and limb of its employees. The era of labor exploitation is definitely over and the need now is for men in office who understand labor relationship. He believes that he does, but he does believe in regimented economy. "Labor is not a commodity," is a fact Mr. Morse mentioned.

He referred to laundry labor cases which came before him when he was arbitrator for the War Labor Board. One case was from the south where laundry operators had paid their colored employees 18 cents an hour, and another from the north where 25 cents was the maximum wage, and needless to say his decisions were not in favor of the employers.

Providing jobs at the end of the war is one of the vital necessities and his belief was that in the Pacific Northwest there is the greatest opportunity in the world to develop new industries and provide payrolls for hundreds of thousands of men. The economic source for jobs in the Northwest has hardly been scratched.

Along this line Mr. Morse declared that new jobs and not higher taxes was the only way in which our huge, mounting national debt can ever be paid off.

Referring briefly to lend-lease Mr. Morse said that it should have been started sooner; what has been done has saved thousands of American lives but more could have been saved by starting lend-lease sooner.

Mr. Morse said that he is not a farmer, although he owns a small acreage in Oregon, that he does not own a huge wheat farm in the state of Washington, which enables its owner to receive large subsidy checks from the federal government, nor does he believe in making his campaign along the lines of movie publicity.

What Oregon as well as many other states need are students of government in both branches of Congress, not mere politicians.

The above is merely in brief a report or some of the things Mr. Morse said but it is this writer's conviction that no one could have heard his address without becoming convinced that Wayne Morse is the man that Oregon should send to Washington as its U. S. senator.

B. P. W. Magazine's Pertinent Reminder For November 7

Mrs. Bertha Smith, legislation chairman of B. P. W., calls attention to the following two paragraphs from the September issue of "Independent Woman," official magazine of B. P. W.:

"Perhaps you are wondering how to get into politics. Rule 1: Register yourself as a voter, according to the laws of your state. Rule 2: Join a political club in your community. There you will discuss issues and meet people who will help you onward if you have ambitions to become a state committeewoman or to run for Congress.

"Remember, you have a big opportunity to better earth's scenes this year. All members of the House of Representatives will be up for re-election in November plus one-third of the Senate and the Governors of thirty-four states, to say nothing of a President for the world's leading nation. Not only will you thank yourself but generations to come will call you blessed if you make the architects of the peace your personal affairs."
