

4-H Club Leaders Awarded Pins

Two Coos county 4-H club leaders were each presented with a gold ten-year leadership pin at the 4-H Club Rally meeting held at the Bunker-Hill school on January 18. The presentation was made by L. J. Allen, Assistant State Club Leader, in behalf of H. C. Seymour, State Club Leader, and Miss Helen Cowgill, Assistant State Club Leader.

The pins were presented to Miss Elvira Olson of Eastside, and Mrs. Faye Holverstott of Fairview. Miss Olson has been closely associated with club work since 1928. She has led 19 different clubs, 16 in Sewing and three in Health, 12 of them completing 100 per cent. Three hundred and one 4-H club members have come under her leadership.

Mrs. Holverstott started her 4-H club career as a club member in Lane county. In 1930, while still a club member, she became interested in leadership and has just completed her 10th year of leadership having led clubs in three Oregon counties: Clackamas, Lane and Coos. Projects she has led are: seven Cookery, one Room Improvement, two Health and one Clothing.

Mr. Allen also presented five-year leadership pins to Wayne Young, Bunker Hill; Mable Molhu, Riverton; and Charles McCulloch of Haynes Inlet. Mr. Young has led nine Woodworking clubs, Mr. McCulloch, six Dairy clubs, and Mrs. Molhu, four Canning and one Knitting club.

The local 4-H Club Leaders' Association has recently started to sponsor awarding first pins to all leaders upon the completion of their first year of successful club leadership. Mrs. Charles McCulloch, president of the Association, awarded pins to the following: Mrs. Harland Montgomery, Millington; Mrs. Harold Libby, Riverton; Mrs. Wm. Church, Riverton; Miss Florence Camp, Bunker Hill; Mrs. Allen Ford, Coos Bay; Mrs. Dick Sneed, North Bend; Mrs. Kay Groat, Green Acres; Mrs. F. T. ### Jack Bartlett's Talk Was Most Interesting

Items was another suggestion, and he told of one section where discarded small potatoes are now used in the manufacture of a needed commodity.

Coos county and Coquille, being practically out of debt, have an ideal opportunity to plan for this post-war development, but do it now, he urged.

But post-war planning is not all economic, there is also the social program to plan and, he mentioned, that before the war there were only three thousand negroes in Portland; now there are thirty thousand in Portland.

Another matter needing planning is in regard to schools. There are too many one-room school districts in Oregon and if petty jealousies of prerogatives could be laid aside and many such districts consolidated there would be a tremendous saving to the taxpayers.

Health is still another item for serious and thoughtful planning and Mr. Bartlett said that we as a nation have been so interested in chasing the almighty dollar that we have overlooked our children's health and their vital needs for proper development. "Get behind your children recreation plans," he urged and mentioned that a "community center" is an ideal way to combat juvenile delinquency.

Religion also should be seriously considered and its teaching should most certainly be included in a city's planning.

Mr. Bartlett uttered a truism when he said, "You can have the kind of people in your city that you want if you plan a city that that kind of people will want."

He closed his address by again cautioning his hearers to "plan not only for the economic but the social needs of man."

The chairman called upon Commissioner P. L. Culver, County Roadmaster Floyd A. Robb, and Chamber of Commerce President Evan Alborn, the latter expressing great interest in Mr. Bartlett's talk and said he realized the C. of C. must help in the city planning.

George Ulett asked the members of the Planning Commission to remain after the meeting to confer with Mr. Bartlett, went on to say that the best employees they had had at the plant here were those who had a stake in the city—owned their own homes.

He said that when he came here 16 years ago that he thought ten or twelve years would be the limit of Smith Wood-Products' operation here, but that if the lumber business is properly managed, with foresightedness, that all manufacturing concerns using our forest products could continue for many years. He mentioned the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. with its "sustained yield" basis as one which would continue longer than any one present could hope to live.

Mr. Ulett also mentioned that ownership of timber lands in western Oregon would probably in time be all consolidated in ownership by three large companies. He did not name them but they are Dant & Russell who own the Coos Bay Lumber Co. and affiliates, the Menasha Woodware Co. and the Weyerhaeuser company.

Planning homes for new people in Coquille is one thing the city must consider, Mr. Ulett said, adding that if 100 people came here to work in new industries there would be no place of them to live.

Supt. Carl E. Morrison, when called upon, said that the city school board is planning for Coquille schools improvements as soon as they can be made.

County Agent Geo. Jenkins mentioned the Land Use Planning which has been a part of his office program for the past ten years.

Later in the meeting Mr. Bartlett talked about sewer disposal plants, a matter of interest in Coquille at this time, and said that their installation involves a considerable engineering problem. He also said he had visited the city's water reservoir with the mayor and had had to help his honor out of the creek when the mayor's foot slipped on the muddy bank!

For street improvements he recommended that pavements be full width, without parking strip between curb and walk. For residential districts he offered the thought that an oil mat is just as satisfactory for paving and costs about 25 per cent as much as concrete.

He said that from what he had heard and seen in Coquille he expects to see this city make good strides in civic improvements, in the post-war period.

In reply to a question by Stan Sherwood as to blue prints and specifications for procedure in seeking new industries, Mr. Bartlett said that the Oregon System of Higher Education is installing research laboratories and will conduct conferences to secure information along such lines.

The speaking was preceded by a very fine fried chicken dinner to which every one present did full justice, including Coquille's justice of the peace.

Harold Zeigler Is In A Very Serious Condition

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zeigler, who lived in Coquille for about eight years before removing to Portland, will be sorry to hear they have both been quite ill. Lillian Zeigler was employed in the local O.P.A. office for over a year and holds a similar position in the O.P.A. office in Portland. She has recovered from the illness but Harold Zeigler, who was employed by the County Road Shops and later by the Smith Wood-Products, Inc. is still in a critical condition. Wednesday of last week he submitted to a second major operation, following which he received two blood transfusions. His son was the blood donor for one transfusion.
