Out-of-Doors Stuff

by LANE LENEVE

One of the most sensible laws relative to game affairs was repealed at the past session of the state legislature. It was the law compelling each holder of a hunting and angling license to file a report each year with the Game Commission wherein was stated the number of game birds and animals killed and the number of the different species of fish caught with hook and line. Such reports enabled the commission to check pretty accurately upon the number of game animals and birds killed and the number of fish taken in all districts of the state. It aided in the planting of fish, the liberating of pheasants and the control in general of laws governing our wildlife.

As anyone with any knowledge of wildlife knows, the enumeration of our wild game is a farce, that it is an impossibility to count, or even to estimate closely the numbers of game animals and birds in the state. But with each hunter and angler furnishing a report each year as to the number of game birds and animals killed and the number of game fish taken in every district in the state, it was not hard to figure out what districts were being depleted or cut down on different species of wildlife, thus making it a simple matter of knowing where to close seasons of wildlife and where to close streams or to plant more game fish.

We believe that there are fewer Chinese presents in Coos county than any county in the entire state with the possible exception of Curry county. Yet the season is opened upon them year after year. We should like to see some of those wildlife enumerators count the birds in this county.

Just recently we read where the season was declared open upon elk only in the counties districts in this state where the elk were doing damage. That is a laugh. Just what damage were the herds of elk doing in Tioga, on the Blue Ridge and in the Allegheny district. Perhaps the Game Commission is fooling some people by such a statement but not the hunters of Coos and Curry counties. The only reason on earth that the season was opened on them in the first place was to enrich the coffers of the Game Commission, to practically auction them off at the price of $5.00 per head—the cost of a special elk hunting license. And then, just to top things off, the elk season is opened at a time when the meat is unfit for human consumption, with the exception of young animals.

We read with regret of the erection of a dam on the south fork of Coos river in the Tioga country. Before the New Deal took over and constructed roads into such isolated sections with the aid of the three C outfits, Tioga was a hunter's and a fisherman's paradise and a spot visited during the seasons by but a few hardy woodsmen. But the open road into the beautiful country brought an influx of hunters and fishermen and now, to cap the climax, a dam is going to be constructed in that beautiful country and upon that wonderful fishing stream that meanders through it. And now it will not be long until sharp axes bite into the trunks of those big friendly trees of Tioga and the song of the faller's saw will be heard. And before the axe and the saw, with the encroachment of the lumbermen will go one of the states most beautiful spots. Those big mountains will be robbed of the beautiful timber and no more will the booming voice of the blue, or sooty grouse echo through the vast forests. The shelter will be shorn from the land that has housed for centuries most every species of wildlife of the Northwest. The spawning beds of our fish, which have journeyed up the south fork for untold time, will go before the splash dam. That whole vast stretch of beautiful wilderness will be reduced to a shambles by logging operations and the little streams, crystal clear, that flow into the south fork will become choked with debris and that beautiful river that has flowed peacefully through that long stretch for years beyond the knowledge of man, will flow never again in our time through a lane of forest giants but will move sluggishly through the shambles of what once was one of God's most beautiful spots.

Where once was beauty, a breathtaking beauty, naught will remain but a land of desolate waste, shorn of all beauty, gone that way by the greed of man, a beauty that stood with the dollar sign marked upon every tree trunk in the eyes of the lumberman. The CCC outfit gave access to such spots 50 years ahead of time. So directly at the door of the New Deal may be laid the despoiling of our beauty spots in such country as Tioga.

You will be thrilled with this trip through the wild and untamed valley of the Rogue River, with the constant battle against nature and the dangerous rapids, until the party reaches the spot where the steelheads spawn.
