

Two Liquor Cases Before Justice Bull Last Week

Dan Edwin Wells, arrested by the state police last Monday, on a driving while intoxicated charge, was found guilty by Justice F. R. Bull, who fined him $100 and $4.00 costs and sentenced him to 30 days in the county jail. The sentence was suspended when he paid the fine and costs and he was released from the county jail.

Roderick Francis Booth, also arrested by the state police for being intoxicated on the public highway, paid $8.00 fine and $4.00 costs in Justice Bull's court on Wednesday.

Murry Bright, from the Powers section, was brought to justice court here on Tuesday for disorderly conduct up there. After hearing the officer's statement, Justice Bull found him guilty of vagrancy and sentenced him to 60 days in the county jail. He then put it up to Bright, who has been in trouble before, that if he would leave the county within 24 hours and remain away for a period of two years, the judge would suspend the sentence. This Bright agreed to do.

Harmonious Meeting C.-C. Pioneer Assn.

Mr. Pollard, of the Oregon State Historical Society, was down from Portland, and spoke at length on the matter of museums and their value along with history, pointing out their usefulness in the matter of education and the advancement of science. During his talk, Mr. Pollard offered many very good and timely suggestions, in the matter of getting along with the work of building up a museum and the value of publicity to carry along to perfection in the ideas and objectives of the organization.

O. C. Sanford was present at the meeting with the prepared articles of incorporation, ready for the signatures of the incorporators and, in this, it looks like a very long step toward the assurance of real success of the Association.

At the next meeting, which will be held early in June, it is expected that a full and complete report as to the type, as well as the location of the museum building, will be presented, as there will be a joint meeting of the budget and building committees. Also there is to be a great many important matters coming up for discussion at the next meeting and a large attendance will be quite necessary in order that matters may be worked out in a satisfactory way, and thus take the burden from the shoulders of the officials who have been battling so long and hard.

Chairman Publicity Com.

Advice On How To Kill Weeds

The most important function of cultivation is weed control. Weeds are most easily killed when small, and if not killed then, they soon compete with the growing vegetables for soil nutrients, water, light, and air. A single cultivation will kill practically all the weeds when small.

Most gardeners are inclined to cultivate too deep. Before the seed is planted is the time to loosen and prepare the soil rather than after the plants are up. Deep cultivation disturbs the root systems of many plants. Tomatoes, for instance, often send out roots as far as 48 inches in each direction while occupying a depth of not over ten inches. Usually cultivation is necessary only to kill weeds or to break the crust which forms after a rain or irrigation. A wheel hoe should be fitted with knives or teeth set to cut shallow so that the weeds will be killed but so that the root systems of the plants will not be disturbed.

A good way to control weeds as well as moisture is to spread a mulch between the rows after the second cultivation. The mulch may consist of rotted leaves or grass clippings from the lawn. The mulch reduces evaporation of water from the soil. The leaves may be spread about an inch thick or the clippings two or three inches thick. Mulches are especially good for reducing fruit cracking and blossom end rot of tomatoes.

There are plenty of arguments over whether tomato plants should be staked or allowed to sprawl over the ground. They are successfully grown either way. Staked tomatoes may be set two feet apart. When they are not staked they require about four foot spacing. Staking should be done at the time the tomatoes are set out as the root system may be injured at a later time.

Now is the time to begin to control the insect pests. The slugs are working on the leafy plants. Many of the other insects have either just shown up or will very shortly. Next week's article will deal with bugs.

Livestock Men Hold Important Meeting

The need for close co-operation among producers in order to make the best use of the limited trucking facilities to market lambs and other livestock during this year was stressed by the directors of the marketing association at a livestock meeting held in Myrtle Point last week. Some relief is hoped for through the purchase of a livestock truck and trailer to be owned by the association and to be used for trucking livestock to market and for hauling feed and other supplies back to the growers, it was stated. In order to assist in making plans for the marketing season growers are requested to list the number and kind of livestock they will have to ship at the County Agent's Office as soon as possible.

To stimulate interest in the production of lambs and wool of higher quality and to assist in developing the industry in the county a Lamb and Wool Show is to be held again this summer and a committee will be appointed soon to have charge of this affair, according to M. G. Arnold, president of the association.

To encourage better range development and to provide for more efficient burning of brush and weeds, the association at its meeting voted in favor of larger payments for fire-guard construction around grazing areas and has requested the AAA committee to attempt to secure the necessary funds for this practice.

Curtis D. Mumford, head of the Farm Management Department at Oregon State College and a member of the Coos County Forest Land Classification committee, spoke briefly on this subject at the meeting. He cited Coos county as being the leading one in the state in the classification program and urged growers to make use of this plan considered basic to the livestock production program. Petitions will be submitted to this committee requesting the classification of the area along the highway south of Powers, according to land owners in that section of the county.

A report given by Clarence Mullins, government trapper, indicated that 41 predatory animals were taken between April 1, 1944, and April 1, 1945, according to the official count as submitted to the Fish and Wildlife Service. Support was given to methods used in the control of predatory animals by a unanimous vote of approximately 50 producers present at the meeting. A committee will be appointed to meet with the Budget Committee to request funds for continuing the work on an enlarged basis during the next fiscal year, the growers feeling that two hunters are necessary in order to keep losses to a minimum.

Black Market Versus Brighter Meals

I guess our town doesn't like rationing any better than other folks. But when a fellow went from door to door the other day, peddling butter, cheese, and bacon without points, he didn't find a single taker.

Ed Carey's missus, Sarah, summed it up. "I'd just be ashamed to have that butter on my table," Sarah says. "I'd a heap rather have my family and guests put up with what I can serve honestly, than give 'em a treat from the Black Market."

These days, most people are agreed that a simple menu of unrationed foods and substitutes is a badge of honor... no apologies required!

And from where I sit, housewives can brighten limited meals with cheerful table decorations, sparkling cider or tangy ice-cold beer, or side dishes of homemade preserves and fruits and nuts. Those little touches can be mighty helpful to the appetite.
