Following The Timber

Editorial from The Oregonian, November 20, 1945

Removal of the head offices of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association from Seattle to Portland, now under way, is in keeping with the new era of the lumber industry, an era marked by efforts seeking permanence, chief of which is the industry's comparatively new interest of growing as much timber each year as it cuts. The move was not unexpected. For many years a large segment of the fir lumbermen has felt that the association offices should be in Portland, if only for geographic reasons, Portland being much nearer the center of the region than Seattle. Seattle was selected some three decades ago because Puget Sound, with its thousands of miles of shore line, was ideal for tidewater mills, both for receiving logs and shipping lumber, and thus became the hub of the fir-producing region. The industry in Oregon progressed more slowly.

Since 1937, however, Oregon has led all states in lumber cut. In Portland, too, are the headquarters of another important trade group, the Western Pine association, and also the regional offices of the United States forest service; and it is likely that closer co-operation between the two great lumber producing regions and between them and the United States forest service is foreshadowed by the move of the West Coast association.

Lumbermen of yore would scarcely recognize the trade associations they helped to found. Both the West Coast and the Western Pine groups now have forestry departments, manned by technical foresters, and tree-growing is an integral part of association work. In the old days, as everyone knows, it was only the amount of logs made into lumber that counted. Today through their associations, modern lumbermen with an eye on the future, are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars each year to insure a continuous source of timber. The Oregonian extends welcome to the West Coast Lumbermen's association, and trusts that the harvested timberlands of its members, as well as those of the Western Pine association—and yes, those of the federal forest service—will grow green and tall with the years.

A Plan Needed

This week several veterans have visited The Sentinel office and told us they were returning to military service. Not because they preferred the army or navy to civilian life, but rather that there seemed no place for them here.

If this is general then it behooves us to get a definite plan worked out to find employment for these men who have served their country so faithfully and well. Perhaps the survey of work to be done, that was broached several months ago by Mayor Orville Wood and others might well be the answer.

At any rate a plan is needed, not tomorrow, but right now. Until such definite procedure is outlined that will help service men, The Coquille Valley Sentinel will publish, free of charge, classified advertisements up to five lines to any ex-service man who needs to find work, secure a house, rent a building, or what have you.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

(Taken from The Sentinel of Friday, November 20, 1925)

The last monthly meeting before the annual election in January of the Coquille Chamber of Commerce was held in the hotel Wednesday evening, with sixty in attendance. Judge John C. Kendall was the speaker of the evening.

The agricultural conference at the Community Building here on Monday and Tuesday was attended by 200 or more farmers, dairymen and ranchers from all sections of the county. One of the high lights of the conference was a confession by a farmer who said: "When the plan of employing a county agent was advocated I opposed it in every way I could. I couldn't see the value of hiring a man to tell me how to run my farm. Now I am willing to get up and admit in public that I was wrong. Since Clyde R. Richards has begun work in this county, farming has already been improved."

Following the close of the annual Red Cross roll call, on Thanksgiving day, the sale of Christmas Seals will be inaugurated by the Coos County Health Association. The officers of the association are A. T. Morrison

Mrs. E. J. Loney, Mrs. C. C. Farr, Mrs. A. E. Elder, and Mrs. Ida Owen.

The new officers of the Lions club for the coming year are: C. R. Richards, C. C. Archibald, J. L. Stevens, Geo. Johnson, Fred Wimer, Geo. W. Bryant, N. C. Kelley, F. G. Bunch, C. W. Gardner, S. M. Noeler and H. C. Gant.

A very pretty home wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. A. Staninger, at four o'clock last Saturday afternoon when their daughter, Cora, was united in marriage to Henry E. Tietdeman. E. A. Palmer of the Christian church performed the ceremony.

Vanishing teas, for the benefit of the library, continue to be popular and the following have been hostesses the past week: Mrs. Lufe Compton, Mrs. J. L. Shawver, Mrs. G. E. Low, Mrs. Ed McKeown, Mrs. W. V. Glaisyer, Mrs. J. L. Smith, Mrs. Clarence Tuttle, Mrs. C. T. Skeels, Mrs. W. E. Bosserman, Mrs. Geo. Johnson, Mrs. Bert Folsom, Mrs. Chas. Evland, Mrs. J. W. Laird, Mrs. C. A. Rietman, Mrs. H. N. Lorenz and Mrs. J. S. Barton.

Iva Wallace Willis Has Discharge

Iva Wallace Willis, 21, radioman, second class, USNR, of Coquille, has been discharged at Camp Shelton, Norfolk, Va. He enlisted in the Navy on February 17, 1942.

Willis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Peary Owens of 378 South Elliott, Coquille, and is married to the Portland.

He was employed by the C. L. Yarbrough Dairy in Coquille before the war.

Cotton Goods to Increase

Cotton house dresses and children's cotton clothing will reach stores in quantity ahead of cotton piece goods or yards goods, according to information received by Miss Lucy Lane, extension clothing specialist at O.S.C.

Early Potatoes Favored

Pontiac, a new variety of potatoes developed in Michigan, made a fine impression on its first appearance in Oregon this year, reports E. R. Jackman, extension specialist in farm crops.

Joe Comes Back

Ex-Mayor Joe Carson stopped over the other night in Portland and said he might have learned a few things about politics while in General Patton's outfit that would fit him for running for the governorship. If the Carson movement started before beaming Joe hit the States gets any more impetus, the Republicans had better draft Spill right now if they want in again.

Knife Enrolled In California School

LOS ANGELES, November 20—Arlington C. Knife, 25, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eimer Knife, 615 No. Heath St., Coquille, has arrived home for a year's training under the G. I. Bill of Rights at the American School of Watchmaking.

Knife, a naval reservist, was discharged last April 13 after approximately two years active duty.

Two cars full of young people from the Baptist church attended the county Young People's Rally at Bandon on Friday. Yvonne Davis of Coquille, president of the association, was in charge of the program. Miss Mary App, assistant pastor of Roseburg, was special speaker. A potluck dinner preceded the program. This group also has a monthly skating party.

Fugelsons Return From Excursion

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Fugelson returned Wednesday, Nov. 14, from a trip to Elma, Wash., to visit their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tice, and small Judy, now one and a half years old. They went up Highway 101 and crossed on the ferry at Astoria. They were enthusiastic over the beauty of the countryside and enjoyed the half-hour ride across the Columbia river. It was stormy but not noticeably rough on the river. This route made their trip much shorter, they said.

Mrs. Fugelson's son, Jerry Sandon of Prentice, Wisconsin, wrote her that Life magazine will carry a story of his home town and pictures of him in an issue coming out in two or three weeks.

The Past Noble Grand club will meet with Miss Ida Oerding, December 7, for a Christmas party.

Gosline Registers In Watch Course

LOS ANGELES, November 29—Glen E. Gosline, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Gosline, 657 West 4th St., Coquille, who spent two years as a yeoman in the navy's Hawaiian Area Brigade, has arrived here to take training at the American School of Watchmaking under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

Gosline, who was discharged last June 19, is a graduate of Coquille high school where he twice won his letter in varsity football as well as three times in basketball. He was sports editor of the school paper. His wife is the former Doris Ann Wood.

As a further complication of R. A. Wernich's injury in an automobile accident last Sept. 2, it was necessary for him to undergo surgery last week which will confine him at home for the next week or ten days.
