You've heard the school teacher's advice, something like this: Start the lesson with something familiar and gradually add the new information. For example, if members of your family think they don't care for carrots and they do like celery, try carrots with celery creamed together. You can't expect everyone to be wildly enthusiastic at first. After all they have their pride to think of.

One of the most successful ways of serving carrots is raw, diced up with cabbage, nuts and celery, to make a refreshing salad. You can serve it with salad dressing or in a gelatin mold.

Here is a recipe that might strike your fancy, called Deep Sea Hideaways:

1 cup sifted enriched flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mustard
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted shortening
½ cup flaked tuna fish

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, and mustard. Beat egg and add milk and melted shortening. Add to flour mixture, stirring only until flour is moistened. Into four greased 3-inch muffin cups put enough batter to half fill each cup. With spoon, make hollows in center of muffins. Press 2 tablespoons flaked tuna fish in each hollow. Cover tuna fish with remaining muffin batter. Bake in moderately hot oven (425° F.) 20 minutes. Serve hot with Vegetable Cream Sauce. Yield: 4 Deep Sea Hideaways.

Vegetable Cream Sauce
¼ cup margarine or butter
¼ cup enriched flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
4 sliced hard cooked eggs
1 cup diced cooked carrots (cooked peas, or cooked carrots and peas may be used)
Melt margarine or butter. Add flour, salt, and pepper, stirring constantly. Add milk gradually, stirring until mixture thickens. Add sliced hard-cooked eggs and carrots. Heat thoroughly. Yield: 4 servings.

Few people deny that vegetables are important in the menu. So if you're having the problem of persuading members of your family to eat these health-giving foods, try first to cater to their whims, then resort to a generous share of food psychology.

Happy New Year to you and your families!

If you have a husband, or a brother or a son, or for that matter, any member of the family, and he doesn't care for vegetables, spelled with a big "V," don't give up. Try another way of preparing the vegetables.

One of the reasons many men don't care for vegetables dates back to their childhood meals when the vegetables were served overcooked. Modern research has revealed that excess cooking makes vegetables less palatable. If you want to cook them in water, they should be cooked in
