Coos County To Receive $52,667.12 From Government

Chief Forester W. H. Horning of the O. & C. Revested Lands Administration, has recently been advised as to the current payments due the Land Grant counties in lieu of taxes on the Revested Lands.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, a total of $856,375.97 has been certified to the Claims Division of the General Accounting Office for payment to the counties in which the revested lands are located. The total amount will be divided among the so-called Land Grant counties in proportion to the valuation of the railroad lands in the various counties at the time title revested to the federal government.

Coos county is scheduled to receive $52,667.12 for the year, and this amount will bring the total payment to Coos county in lieu of taxes on the revested lands, since 1917, to approximately $1,310,000.00.

Curry County Shares Taxes
Curry county will also share in the division of revenues in the amount of $4,196.25 which will bring the total payments of that county to approximately $73,000.00.

The largest share of the $856,375.97, in the amount of $233,382.45, will go to Douglas county where the greatest percentage of O. & C. Revested Lands are located. Lincoln county which has only a very limited amount of revested land will receive the smallest payment, $4,110.61.

Under the U. S. Department of Interior program for the sustained yield management of the revested railroad grand lands, it is anticipated that perpetual forest crops on the lands will continue to produce substantial revenues for the counties through the coming years. As none of the lands are being sold, the principal source of revenue is derived from the sale of mature and overmature timber, with additional revenue coming from grazing leases on lands where forest growth is not retarded by regulated grazing use.

1946 Farm Goals Needed Higher Triple A Chieftain Announces

Another year of high output from Oregon's farms and ranches is asked for in 1946 farm production goals for the state, just announced by R. B. Taylor, chairman of the state AAA committee and Oregon director of the field services branch, USDA Production and Marketing administrator.

The goals were determined by a committee of Oregon agricultural officials and the USDA on the basis of desirable trends and state production capacity. For most crops, the goals call for acreages about the same or larger than 1945. With the exception of dairy products, goals for livestock and poultry are somewhat lower.

Feeds Needed Badly

Increased outputs of feeds and grains are requested. The goals are: Corn, 50,000 acres, up 25 per cent from 1945; oats, 450,000 acres, up 10 per cent; barley 280,000 acres, up seven per cent; all tame hay, 880,000 acres, up four per cent; wheat, 1,000,000 acres, up three per cent; rye, 35,000 acres, up six per cent.

Goals for food crops include dry beans, 1,000 acres, no change; sugar beets, 17,000 acres, no change; potatoes 46000 acres down 16 per cent. Although no Oregon goals have been set for vegetables for processing, attention is directed to national goals of 25 per cent reduction in snap beans, two per cent cut in sweet corn, eight per cent cut in green peas, and the same acreage of tomatoes.

Goals for cover crop and legume seeds are: Hairy vetch, 55,000 acres, up two per cent; Willamette vetch, 70,000 acres; 24 per cent less than last year's combined Willamette and common vetch acreage; Austrian winter peas, 30,000 acres, up seven per cent; common ryegrass, 80,000 acres, no change; alfalfa 10,000 acres up 43 per cent; red clover, 20,000 acres, up 53 per cent; alsike clover, 25,000 acres, up 150 per cent; la-

Dr. Strand Calls On Agriculture And Industry To Cease Competition

The interdependence of agriculture and industry, and the importance of national and international affairs in the future prosperity of any farmer in Oregon, were facts stressed over and over again by speakers at the statewide conference on marketing and distribution sponsored by the division of agriculture at Oregon State college in mid-January.

Though some two-dozen speakers came from many states and different agencies, their conclusions were in singular agreement as to the importance of such fundamental developments as price policies, government financing, the future of international trade, industrial development on the west coast, America's future policy in the Pacific and other matters that were not always thought of as part of the "farm problem."

President A. L. Strand of the college, as keynote speaker, made some frank assertions in outlining possible future trends which were later supported by other speakers. He enumerated both liabilities and assets in the present situation which he likened to the "reshowing of a movie seen previously," which it is now hoped can be changed in certain respects.

Competition Seen Bad

The worst liability now, in Dr. Strand's opinion, is competition between agriculture and other groups for advantage. "The jockeying for economic position, based on group pressures as we see it exemplified today, marks out a sure road to inflation and a complete economic debacle," he warned.

He quoted the 1945 land-grant college report on postwar agriculture policy as saying, "legislation and other programs designed to aid certain groups at the expense of the national interest not only fail to provide adequately for the public welfare, but often may actually harm the specific groups which such measures are intended to benefit, by postponing the solution of the problems which they seek to correct."

President Strand listed several hopeful aspects as well, including a wider realization of the dependence of agriculture and industry on one another, and the scientific assistance and trained leadership now available to agriculture. The good life is not reached merely by a technical approach, however, he said.

"We have fought and our young men have bled to make this a moral world," he concluded. "Any theory of economic and social progress that leaves out this consideration will be painfully deficient. There must be an ingrained, underlying sense of human justice to illumine the mind and guide the will to act. Without that there can be no stability in our efforts to integrate agriculture with industry to mutual benefit. Without that there can be no peace."

Farm Aid Calls Show Increase

A sharp increase in the number of returned veterans and farmers from other areas who are seeking aid in getting set up on farms in Coos and Curry counties during the past three months is reported by Tollef Brudos, county farm security supervisor, Room 14, Bank building, Coquille.

Scarcity of good, developed family-type units for rent or sale on the basis of their worth is the problem most frequently reported.

New five-year loans for livestock, machinery and operating goods have been made to over a large number of returned veterans and farmers since V-J day and more than 100 applications have been reviewed by the county FSA committee, said Brudos. Loan applications in process of being completed on January 1, were highest since the early years of the war.

Few Farms Available

While many applications and inquiries, particularly from veterans, are being received for 40-year farm ownership loans under the Bankhead-Jones act, very few good farms are being found for sale at reasonable prices.
