How can you tell a good hat?

1 It should be soft

—soft as a puppy's ear. Neither "boardy" nor mushy. Pick up a Mallory Hat and you'll feel the most distinctive softness you've ever found in a hat. Yet softness isn't all.

2 It should be lively

As a casting rod. That's important, too. For if you should dent or crush the lively felt in your Mallory, a finger touch will snap it back, smooth as new.

3 It should be mellow

as a well-loved pipe. Hatters call a hat "mellow" that keeps its softness and liveliness despite wear and weather. Every Mallory Hat is hand-mellowed by the nimble fingers of many skilled hatmakers.

4 Perhaps the easiest way to appreciate the difference in a Mallory is simply to take one between your fingers. The jaunty new lightweight Mallory "Nokabout" shown here, for instance. See it today in the new spring colors! At various prices, from
