

Mill Worker Sues To End Dock Strike

A one-man attempt to stop the current labor dispute between the Waterfront Employers association of the Pacific Coast and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union, CIO, was started in U. S. district court in Portland Monday.

Arnold L. Couty, Coos Bay, who says he is an employee of the Coos Bay Lumber company but has been out of work six weeks because of the maritime tieup, filed a petition of his own phrasing demanding that both groups show cause in court why the strike should continue.

Couty said he was unable to get an attorney to handle his case so he did it himself. He paid the necessary $15 to file his action in the federal court. Now it must be considered by the judges. The federal court clerk's office said the filing is "most unique."

In his petition, Couty charges that the defendants, both management and labor, "extended a labor dispute to maintain an obstruction in the loading and unloading of ships in the ports of the Pacific Coast and did so impair . . . commerce as to cause unemployment in lumber saw-mills and so bring injury to the plaintiff."

He asks the court to summon both defendants before it to answer these charges and to show cause why the court shall not honor his petition for a redress of grievances by directing both defendants to resume usual operations.

Community Chest Starting Slow

Contributions to the Community Chest are coming in, but not as fast as in past years, it was reported today by several members of the Active club who are conducting the Coquille campaign.

However, several unusually large checks have been received by the Active club for the Chest funds, and many of these have been unsolicited, being turned in by people who mentioned the fact that they had read the publicity and names of committeemen in The Sentinel and were making their donations before being solicited.

The Active club will solicit the entire town.

Power Out; Cooks Use "Hot" Bursts

When a break in line 20 from Roseburg and, consequent overloading caused Myrtle Point, Powers and Coquille to have a series of outages at dinner time Monday, Coquille cooks were hard put to keep the venison steaks frying.

While Coquille was out for minutes at a time, Coos Bay and North Bend were out for an hour, W. J. B. Head, Mt. States Power manager, said.

Reason given was the fact that with outages now the Coos Bay power plant is unable to supply the area without the aid of the Coos Bay Lumber company's plant—and mill shutdown—no power for extra loads.

Most violent complaint which rung in Manager Head's ears was that of a cake baker who had a party coming off in the evening and had her whole dessert menu planned around a cake in the oven—half-cooked, and then
